Matthews Officials Working to Correct 'Bad' Tasting, Discolored City Water

MATTHEWS – Acknowledging that city water left something to be desired, Mayor Harold Burch and the city council today appealed for patience while they worked on a solution. They described the water's taste and color as "bad."

Cost of any corrective undertaking was cited as a reason why there had not been earlier action.

Public attention was called to the city's discolored water in a Daily Standard news story July 16 by R. E. Hartline, a resident who complained about broken water mains in the neighborhood.

"The water is inspected by the state board of health and is sampled monthly," a statement by the mayor and council reported. "This does not mean the water is not terrible tasting to most people and is not discolored to some degree.

"When the well was first put in use, eight years ago, the water had a fairly good taste and was not discolored. After a year or so the water began to change. We have been told that this can happen to any water stream on the Sikeston ridge because of the subsoil texture.

"At present we have over 150 houses that are users of city water. All of these users have bad water because of the taste and color. This water is not poisonous."

Answering their own question why the aldermen didn't "fix the water," the statement continued:

"At the time the city voted to put in city water there had to be voted a tax increase. Before this there was $.60 per $100 evaluation tax. The increase that was voted on was $1.50 bringing our present tax to $2.10 per $100. Our bonds for this project amounted to a total of $98,000 to be paid off by 1979. Anyone who knows anything about money, interest and payments knows that a city of 450 residents was loaded. At this time there was no federal aid available.

"Almost all the water users in Matthews know that up to now it has been impossible to do anything about the water. A large number of residents have purchased automatic water softeners to improve their water. These softeners are expensive, but the cost of a community water filtering system is in excess of $40,000.

"There are a few residents in our city that tend to be critical of the way things are now. They would like to bring disgrace to our city with their accusations and threats. We are afraid that they will only hurt themselves.

"Four months ago we began studying our financial situation to see if there was any way of financing a water filtering system. We have met with our bonding company, our engineers, and have talked with the Farmers Home Administration.

"There is a good possibility that we can get enough federal aid to make it possible for us to install the filtering system plus a sewage disposal system. Both of these systems are much needed in our city. Both systems would increase property value in our city. With these improvements we would attract more residents to our city and would be likely to attract some industry. We can expand with a new addition that we have discussed.

"We know we need to improve our water system. We are working toward a solution of our problems. We are asking the cooperation of all the residents of Matthews. With your cooperation we will work diligently to improve this situation."

Matthews councilmen are Ralph Faries, Harlan Gilmer, Gene Curtis and Ellis Reed.

City Manager W. Raymert Miller Succeeds Monsignor McGrane as Recovery Pilot

City Manager W. Raymert Miller was elected chairman of Recovery Inc. by its executive committee Friday night in the city administration building.

The former chairman the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter J. McGrane submitted his resignation after being assigned to Aurora parish. He was pastor of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church.

Recovery Inc., is composed of ministers and church laymen. It's main purpose is to improve substandard housing and aiding Negroes in finding jobs.

A tentative operating budget of $50,000 has been set as a goal.

Members of the finance committee reported that a letter urging the moral support of all churches for the project will be mailed to pastors next week. They suggested that each church endorsing the plan appoint one members to serve as a liaison between the church and Recovery Inc.

How the money is collected in each church will be up to each church leader, but a single Sunday is planned for soliciting donations.

Dr. Robert E. Lively Jr., pastor of Trinity Baptist Church, chairman of the community betterment committee of the organization, reported on plans.

W. Raymert Miller

Dr. Lively said that Community Action Agency has obtained information on the condition of houses in Sunset Addition, which will be available to the committee.

Cleaning up one or more blocks of Sunset Addition by removing trash and painting houses was discussed at the committee meeting and will be referred to The Missourians, a group of Negro leaders in Sunset.

The major problem in getting a clean up project started, Dr. Lively said, is communication with the community.

"We can't very well tell a man he has to paint his house," Dr. Lively added.

Charles Mitchell, reporting on the activities of the real estate committee, said that a map of the empty lots in Sunset is being studied for possible building sites.

The pressing need is a site for a subdivision, Mitchell said. Federal Housing Administration loans are available to those who qualify for a home improvement loan.

The FHA covers 90 per cent of the loans for improvements, Mitchell continued, and Recovery Inc. could cover the remaining 10 per cent of loans granted.

An FHA representative viewed Sunset and other areas of town with Mitchell and sent a kit for subdivision development. The major problem is where to develop a subdivision. If one block or more of Sunset were to be leveled for such a project where would the people live while it was being built, Mitchell asked.

Mitchell said the city under the provisions of the workable program will qualify for federal rent subsidies, which could help persons move into a subdivision.

Mayor Kendall Sikes questioned the rent subsidy statement and asked for more information on it.

The subdivision is most important, Mitchell stated. The 75 housing units for the elderly planned by the Sikeston Housing Authority already has 116 applications, Mitchell pointed out.

Charles Mays, Minneapolis, field co-ordinator for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People who has been working in Sikeston on a summer project three weeks aired his findings.

He stated that after taking a survey of 200 families in Sunset this summer three needs prevail. They are employment, housing and education.

Mays urged corporation in allowing Negroes to integrate. Building a subdivision and keeping the Negroes segregated is going backward, he said.

Mays is from Minneapolis. He asked efforts to convince people that property value will not go down when a Negro moves into a neighborhood.

Miller explained to Mays that the group is convinced of this but that prejudice exists and it may take years to overcome it. But, he added, "we are trying."

Speaker Stresses Three Needs of Negroes

Three ingredients were outlined to Sikeston Negroes as a prescription for victory by National Association for the Advancement of Colored People leader Gloster B. Current, New York City, in a meeting Friday night at the Community Action Agency.

No miracle drug is prescribed for the ills of this community, Current said. The recovery may resemble the recovery from tuberculosis. It will take patience and rest. It may require an operation, but a cure is in the offing.

What you must do to fill the prescription, Current continued, is first become a registered voter. As part of the NAACP summer project in Sikeston, workers have been reviewing the registration rolls and urging those persons who need to be registered to do so.

It is only when you have the power to vote that the politicians will listen, Current said.

As an example, Current continued, why doesn't Howardsville, a Negro community near the hometown of the governor, have a fire truck?

Furthermore, why doesn't the governor do something about it, he posed.

If you are registered voters and you ask the governor to do something about it, he'll listen to you. And if nothing is done he'll hear from you in November, he said.

The second main ingredient, Current said, is to motivate youth to stay in school as long as they can.

Businesses everywhere are looking for an "instant Negro" who is qualified, Current said. But the youths have to stay in school and obtain a degree, before the doors of opportunity will open, he said.

The third and most important ingredient for victory is to keep trying, he said. Don't feel defeated when progress is slow. Keep fighting for your freedom, believe in it and act accordingly.

Current warned the audience to beware of "quacks" who prescribe violence and riots as remedies to the social ills.

The persons who suffer most from riots and violence are the Negroes, he said. It is their community that is burned. The businesses that served them move out, because they no longer can obtain insurance.

Current said the progress has to come through the democratic system, and this is a slow process. It requires conferences, debate, examination, discussion and persistence for just a little progress.

President Johnson has done more for the Negroes than anyone ever expected, Current said. "He is one of, if not the most, progressive President we have had," he continued.

The federal government is doing much to make equality a reality through legislation, Current said.

Current's speech came at the midpoint of the NAACP's summer

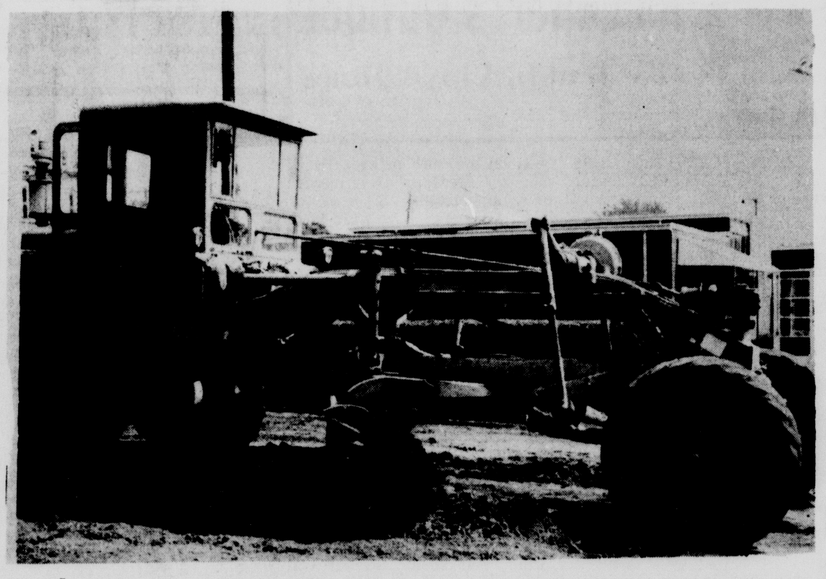
IMPROVEMENTS were made at the police station. New sidewalks were built. The parking lot is being resurfaced. A new awning was installed to replace the one damaged in a storm this summer, and touch up painting and trimming has been done around the building.



THE SURFACE of the police department parking lot was graded and mixed with oil by city street department workers. The surface is a hot blade mix, similar to asphalt.

School Merger Decision Delayed

NEW MADRID -- Lyle Bird, Matthews, told a countywide meeting of school boards last night at the court house that the county school board of which he is president has agreed to give the boards a week to complete a survey on a proposed single county school district. There are eight school districts in the county.

Seventy five attended the meeting.

The consolidation plan calls for retention of present high schools and elementary schools and the establishment of a technical school at Catron.

School board members from the eight of the high school districts, presented the views of their boards and voters.

Four of the school district boards unanimously endorsed the county board single district proposal. One board voted 5 to 1 in favor. Two districts asked for additional time for a final decision.

Voting unanimously for the plan were the school boards of Portageville, Lilbourn, New Madrid and Matthews. The Morehouse board voted for it a five to one.

Risco and Parma asked more time to survey their districts.

The Gideon school board asked that their district be left out of the consolidation, reporting that a petition signed by 900 expressed this sentiment.

A Morehouse representative reported that they had a petition bearing 575 names asking that their district be annexed to the Sikeston R-6 district.

J. V. Conran, New Madrid county Democratic political boss, outlined the proposal.

Conran told representatives from the Gideon and Morehouse districts:

"I want you to know, each district has its own choice where it wants to send its children and chose its own school system and tax levy.

"If you choose to be left out of any reorganization plan, you will be left alone and will be under the jurisdiction of a new seven-man state commission," Conrad said.

The county board can submit a single county district plan to the state board of education in Jefferson City. If approved citizens of the county can be given the opportunity to vote on it.

If approved it would be submitted to the seven-man state committee, and if approved, a six-man county board would be chosen.

No school districts can be reorganized until after January of 1969.

All members of the county school board were present: Bird, Charles Pikey, Conran, vice-president; A. C. Riley, New Madrid; Comer Hicks, Risco; James Fletcher, Gideon; Tom Marshmeyer, Lilbourn, and Sam Bodine, New Madrid, secretary and non-voting member.

Something to Chew on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has announced a research study its subjects can get their teeth into.

In fact they'll have to in the study of chewing for which Case Institute of Technology in Cleveland, Ohio, received a $71,798 Division of Dental Health grant Friday.

Sweden to Move Drivers to Right

STOCKHOLM (AP) — To make sure its prisoners go right when they emerge into freedom, Sweden is including prisons in a massive publicity campaign preceding the nation's changeover to right-hand driving.

The final stage of the publicity campaign is being kicked off this weekend, two weeks before drivers take to the right side of the road. The changeover is costing $120 million, with $7 million of that allotted for publicity.

"We have to reach everybody, including handicapped people, foreigners, children, prisoners and so on," says Lars Skioeld, director of the Right-Hand Traffic Commission.

Newspapers and broadcast stations are being used in the advertising campaign. Eight million brochures will be distributed Monday to all Swedish households, hospitals and prisons. More brochures in 10 languages are available for foreigners living in Sweden.

Toys, soda and beer bottles and milk packages are being used to impress everyone that Sept. 3 is H-Day. The H stands for hoeger, right in Swedish.

By H-Day 360,000 directional signs will have been replaced or changed. Roads will bear 130,000 posters reminding the public to keep right.

"It has gone well so far," Skioeld said this week. "We hope, with the help of 8,000 policemen against 1,300 normally, and 150,000 volunteers, that Sept. 3 will come and go as smoothly as possible."

EDWIN GARNER, Farmington, shares a view of a ceramic bowl on display at a crafts show from 1 p.m. - 9 p.m. today and Sunday at the Holiday Inn, with Mrs. James Terrell, representing the Sikeston Council on the Arts. He will lecture on stoneware pottery at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Man Admits Shooting and Burning Family to Death

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — Stearns County Sheriff Peter Lahr said today that David Hoskins, 30, has admitted shooting his wife and himself and setting the fire that destroyed the farm home in which the couple's four small children burned to death.

Mrs. Hoskins' body was also found in the smoldering rubble of their central Minnesota farm home early Friday.

Lahr called a news conference at which he said Hoskins had admitted the shootings and accompanying incidents.

Lahr said he had obtained a signed statement from Hoskins in which he admitted shooting his wife, Loretta, 29, with a .22-caliber rifle about midnight Thursday, then setting fire to the farm home and other buildings before tieing himself to an outdoor clothesline pipe.

Hoskins also admitted shooting himself with the same weapon, the sheriff said, and fabricated the story that intruders had shot him and then set the fires before tying him up.

Lahr said Hoskins told him that after he had bound himself he realized the children were in the burning home but became entangled and was unable to free himself.

When a group of teen-agers, attracted by the flames about midnight Friday, found Hoskins he was still tied to the clothesline pipe and bleeding from wounds in the abdomen and shoulder.

Lahr said he would ask County Atty. Paul Doerner to prepare a complaint against Hoskins charging him with the deaths of his wife and children.

The sheriff said a motive for the crime had been established but he did not elaborate.

Trooper Captures Wanted Man

A highway patrolman captured Joseph J. Kramer, 27, who gave a Chicago address. They accused him of leaving a house near Doniphan in a stolen car following a shooting in a family quarrel Friday.

The patrol received a call at 12:45 a.m. Friday from Trooper Kenneth Lancaster and Sheriff Louis Dawes in Ripley county that the escaped man had been shot in the stomach in the quarrel.

Kramer departed in a car, which was wrecked near Elsinore, fled on foot and was reported captured by a trooper.

Ralph Smith, one-armed deputy sheriff of Grandin, held briefly and took one of two guns out of the car before Kramer escaped.

Bloodhounds from Cape Girardeau joined the man hunt. Kramer was taken to the Ripley county jail at Doniphan.

Prospects Good For State Fair Opening

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri State Fair gates swung open today with prospects the crowd would be one of the largest for the opening day in the 65-year history of the fair.

Clear skies and cool temperatures and a night shower which settled the dust added to the fairgrounds' attraction.

The Highway Patrol said judging by the traffic on roads leading here there would be a big turnout. The patrol has assembled 75 troopers from various parts of the state to handle traffic during the fair's nine-day run.

This was Armed Forces Day and military units took part in opening ceremonies.

There were to be big car races this afternoon and jalopy races tonight. Also tonight will be the first of the horse shows.

Weekend Air to Remain Cool

KANSAS CITY (AP)— It will be a cool weekend in Missouri.

Temperatures dipped to record lows this morning in the northwest. It was 48 at both Maryville and St. Joseph. The Maryville reading was two degrees lower than the old mark for the date set in 1897. At St. Joseph it was three degrees under the old mark established in 1950.

Four Injured in Two Collisions

Four were injured in traffic accidents Friday at Marston and near Hayti.

In a four-car collision Friday at 8:45 p.m. on highway 61, three miles north of Hayti, John Smith, 57, Caruthersville and his wife, Gladys, 51, were injured when their 1951 Studebaker pickup truck slowed and was struck in the rear by a 1965 Volkswagen, driven by Judith Hart, 26, St. Louis, who struck a 1963 Buick, driven by Doyle Gross, 28, McCalla, Ala. The Volkswagen then hit the left side of a 1958 Ford, driven by Hiram Beck.

Smith received a sprained neck and body bruises, and Mrs. Smith, a head bump. Both were taken to the Pemiscot County Memorial hospital in Hayti.

Friday at 7:05 p.m. on highway 61, at the south edge of Marston, Philip Sinan, Jr., 35, Westchester, Ohio, was hurt critically in a two-car collision. He is in the Pemiscot County Memorial hospital with a skull fracture, concussion, chest injuries and face cuts.

Driving a 1966 Ford he attempted to pass a tractor trailer on a curve, causing a 1966 pickup truck driven by William McKernan, 57, NEW Haven, to go to the shoulder, where it was struck by the Sinan car when the driver lost control.

McKennan received head cuts and fractured ribs. He was taken to the Hayti hospital.

Refugee Flow Stirs Bitterness

ALLENBY BRIDGE, Israeli-hold Jordan (AP)— Israel and Jordan traded charges of inefficiency in the repatriation of Jordanians to Israeli-held Jordan after only 355 refugees got home Friday.

The Red Cross had said about 1,000 would make the first crossings at what is left of Allenby Bridge and another bridge at Umm As-Shurat, 10 miles to the north.

Jordan has announced that 167,500 of the more than 200,000 Arabs who fled their homeland as Israeli troops seized the western bank of the Jordan River in the June 5-10 war want to be repatriated. But Israel says it doubts whether more than 35,000 can return before the Aug. 31 deadline Israel has set.

The crossings were halted today because Saturday is the Jewish Sabbath. If they are also halted next Saturday, Aug. 26, that would leave just 10 days more for repatriation.

Bitter feelings have already cropped up on both sides.

"The Jordanian organization let us down badly," said an Israeli interior ministry spokesman of Friday's repatriation. "It is apparently just not equipped to handle a project of this size."

But Jordanian officials complained that the names of those eligible to cross had been turned in by Israel only Thursday— too late to organize the refugees efficiently.

Most of the first refugees were women, children and bent old men in long robes. This led the secretary of Jordan's refugee committee, Brig. Abdullah Rafee, to comment: "It seems the Israelis have selected only the very young and very old and have taken no chances on letting young men return yet."

Roland Troyon, a Red Cross official, said it would take six months to complete the repatriation at the present rate. But the Red Cross hopes to step up the flow of refugees to 4,000 a day next week.

Mills Claims Tougher Approach to Welfare Could Save $700 Million a Year in 5 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sponsors of a tougher approach to federally aided state welfare programs claim it would save the federal government more than $700 million a year within five years— even with greater initial outlays to help put recipients to work.

These claims will help fuel the arguments in the Senate Finance Committee and the Senate itself over the Social Security bill the House passed Thursday, embodying new requirements for welfare programs. Strong efforts are expected to make these less stringent.

When Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, the principal architect of the changes, defended them before the House, his argument dealt not so much with economy as with the need to break what he described as an unforeseen cycle of mounting welfare rolls.

"Is it in the public interest for welfare to become a way of life?" he asked, adding that the House Ways and Means Committee he heads has learned that in some aid to dependent children programs "we are now, in some instances, taking care of the third consecutive generation."

"I have reached the conclusion that this trend has got to be reversed," the Arkansas Democrat said.

He described new requirements spelled out for states getting federal help in caring for dependent children— job training and community work programs, exemption of earnings from benefit deduction, day care, and the like— as all aimed at urging members of assisted families who are capable of working to do so.

In addition the House bill contains sections to require family planning services and measures to establish paternity, designed to reduce the influx of children into the welfare programs, and a percentage freeze on the number of children each state may admit to its aid programs, except in cases of death or disablement of the breadwinner.

Mills said the Health, Education and Welfare Department estimates that, if the House bill becomes law, by 1972 there will be 400,000 fewer dependent children on the rolls than there would have been without the changes. His committee included in its report a table designed to show the over-all effect of the changes in the bill would reduce welfare costs $78 million this year and as much as $713.5 million in the year beginning July 1, 1971.

The big future savings depend heavily, however, on a change not directly connected with the dependent children's programs— a limitation on eligibility for medicaid which, unlike medicare, is a state-operated, federally assisted health program for persons of limited income. The saving on medicaid, the committee estimated, would be more than $1.4 billion in fiscal 1972.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE CHANNEL THE HARD WAY

Harry Hinken, personnel director for the Washington Redskins Marching Band, is scheduled to swim the English Channel on Thursday (Aug. 24). The International Lifeguard Championships will be held at Carpenteria, Calif., on Saturday (Aug. 26).

THE CHALLENGE of the English Channel to swimmers appears undying. The feat has been accomplished almost 60 times in the past decade, but about 1,000 swimmers have tried. An American is attempting to be the first to cross the channel paralyzed from the waist down.

Harry Hinken, an insurance salesman, former athlete, and one-time drum major of the band of the Washington Redskins football team, has been crippled by polio for the past 14 years. Despite his affliction, he will try to swim the Channel on Aug. 24. He will be swimming the Cap Gris-Nez, France, to Dover route. It's a distance of 20.6 miles and is generally considered the easy way. But without the use of his legs, Hinken's has to be the hard way.

RECORDS OF CHANNEL SWIMS have been kept for almost a century. The first known conqueror of the Channel was Capt. Matthew Webb of Great Britain, who in 1875 swam from Dover to Calais in 21 hrs., 45 min.

E. H. Temme of Britain was the first to swim the Channel in both directions (1927, 1934). William Barnie of Scotland was the first to swim it both ways in one year -- July and August 1951. Gertrude Elderle in 1926 was the first American woman to swim it.

Trudy, as she was called, was a creature and a star of America's Era of Champions and of Wonderful Nonsense. She was only 19 when she became the first women ever to swim the Channel. On her return to the States she was greeted with a Broadway ticker-tape parade. In two years after her swim, she estimated, she made $375,000.

No such bounty has come to America's Florence Chadwick, who has swum the Channel four times, the past three hard, West-East way. Leonore Modell of the United States, aged 14 years and 5 months, in 1964 became the youngest person ever to swim the Channel.

Fred Baldasare, American frogman from Cocoa Beach, Fla., on July 11, 1962, became the first man to swim the Channel underwater. Antonio Abertondo of Argentina in Sept. 1961 was the first man to swim round trip, taking 18 hrs., 50 min. from England to France and 24 hrs., 25 min. for the return trip. Ted Erikson, a Chicago physiotherapist, made the round trip in 30 hrs., 10 min. in 1965.

MEN HAVE TRIED to navigate La Manche (the sleeve), as the French call it, on a bedstead, a bathtub, in a canoe, and on a bale of hay. Back in 1963 one David Trapp did it in 7 hrs., 45 min. on an emphibious farm tractor.

When Harry Hinken makes his big swim he will be accompanied by either a doctor or a nurse. The rules of the English Swimming Association provide for this kind of protection.

Times of swims are expressed in hours and minutes and are considered official by the Channel Swimming Association only if swimmers are accompanied by official observers. Even in these disorderly times, we have to live by SOME rules.

Those of us here today who have been elected to constitutional office or legislative position are in that three-word phrase. The art of knowing when to keep silent should be ranked as the highest order of genius.

President Lyndon B. Johnson's problems are coming home to roost and the hen house is filled to overflowing.

It would be nice to agree with the politicians and convince ourselves that his request for a 10 per cent federal income surtax was unnecessary.

Nice except for the fact that the consequences would hurt the American people as much or more than they would the chief executive. After all, the President personally will bear only his financial share of the consequences regardless of what inaction will do to him politically.

The American people cannot now decide that President Johnson has too expensive tastes and they will ignore the consequences.

They put him in office and until his presidential term runs out they are going to have to accept all the consequences of his Great Society program, which they also endorsed at the polls. There's no way now to turn off the faucet.

When it comes time to vote again it will be another story but by then the deficit will be at record levels.

The greatest difficulty the country is now experiencing is the President's insitence on a guns and butter economy.

He has not established priorities.

When he went into office it may have been that the country could afford to pay both the costs of the Vietnam war and the expansive Great Society domestic program without resort to price and wage controls and without serious dislocation of the national economy.

If that were ever true it no longer is.

Inflation has returned as a serious threat to every citizen. The economy is getting overheated again and the deficit has risen so high, the Vietnam war costs have grown so astronical, the domestic requirements of the Johnson administration are soaring so high with each of his television appearances that even Johnson is worried about the consequences.

The 10 per cent surtax is vital under the circumstances. It is folly to talk of reducing federal costs to the point where it won't be necessary to apply the tax increase.

President Johnson isn't going to make any such reduction and the momentum of programs now in progress would limit its effectiveness if he did. Siphoning off the money from consumers to reduce their purchasing power still would be desirable as a means of reducing the inflation danger. The country should not risk another money crisis as the tight money squeeze produced earlier this year.

There is no real choice.

On the federal income tax surcharge proposal the best interests of the American people will be served if Congress, however reluctantly and wearily, once more goes all the way with LBJ.

The need for drivers to be extra alert as they travel to and from the State Fair was voiced today by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

"Every highway leading to the State fairgrounds will probably be heavily traveled during the days the Fiar is in progress," declared Colonel Hockaday. "It will be necessary for drivers to be alert for the mistakes of others and to show an extra amoung of courtesy to fellow motorists."

The Missouri State Fair begins Saturday, August 19, and ends Sunday, August 27.

"A trip to the State Fair is an annual custom for thousands of families," the Superintendent continued, "so every motorist should do his very best job of driving. I urge you to travel at prudent speeds, be patient and yield the right of way."

Colonel Hockaday also invited the public to visit the Highway Patrol's new exhibit trailer which will be located near the Highway Gardens area of the fairgrounds. The 50 by 10 foot air conditioned trailer contains display panels showing the work done by the Patrol to serve and protect the citizens of Missouri.

"We hope you will stop by our trailer and see how the Patrol goes about its job of enforcing the laws of the State. A patrolman will be on duty to answer any questions you might have concerning your Highway Patrol," Hockaday concluded.

USING THEIR HEADS

In these days when advocates of socialized power constantly clamor for support to build or expand public power facilities, it is heartening to know that there are people, who, when given a choice between tax-subsidized public power and investor-owned taxpaying power, prefer the services of a company operating in the free enterprise tradition.

Residents of Asotin County, Washington, a rural area in the extreme southeastern part of the state, had this choice recently, and they displayed their independence and respect for the private ownership system by rejecting a bid to replace an established investor-owned company with a Public Utility District.

In typical fashion, advocates of the PUD proposed their plan on the promises of lower rates for both water and electricity. But voters, recognizing the promises were half-truths, said "no" to the proposition in record numbers. They knew the consequences of public ownership would mean an increase in local taxes, not only for the cost of purchasing the power facilities, but to make up for the loss of tax revenue the investor-owned utility pays each year to all levels of governmane. They were not ready to turn out a tax-paying, publicly-regulated company which had proved many times over its ability to provide dependable, efficient service at reasonable rates.

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

Recent addresses to the graduating classes of two of our nation's largest colleges were noteworthy for their lack of comment on pride in United States citizenship and a free economy. One stressed the problems of technology, education, military aid, leadership, food production, peace and the hydrogen age.

The other was confined to problems of the university and the times, and the hope for a recognition of responsibility for maintaining and building the institution. Nowhere was there a forthright statement of the fact that the future of academic freedom and independent universities rests on perpetuation of our constitutional form of government and a free enterprise system, as contrasted with the totalitarian state.

It still remains for our schools and colleges to teach their students sound economics. No word was spoken to build pride in private property ownership and private enterprise, which are the foundation of our independent school system support. It's about time that our educators got over being afraid to use the terms mean to their future. Because if they are swallowed by government, academic freedom, as well as freedom of the individual, will be a thing of the past and representative government will be over. They will sink or swim together--they must support each other.

DRESS TIPS:

Belt wearers should smooth the waistline of the shirt towards the back, after the belt is tightened. This eliminates the wrinkles and bulging at the waistline...When shoes have had continuous wear, such as on a trip, give them a few days' rest and sprinkle some moth crystals inside to freshen them...If you wear a tie tack, do not pin it so that the tie is pulled too tautly. Allow enough play so that it won't pull the knot away from the collar.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

ON STRETCHING TEACHERS

IN A FEW WEEKS a record number of young Americans will be streaming back to the public schools and we will be faced once again with a "teacher shortage" that grows worse each year.

You cure labor shortages in one of three ways:

You train and hire more workers.

You require your existing workers to work harder.

You evolve new techniques which will improve the output without increasing the work force or adding to the work load.

The entire success of the American industrial system has been based on methods of boosting the output faster than the work force. Only by so doing has it been possible to increase real wages, to pay the dividends necessary to attract capital for expansion, and to accumulate surpluses so that obsolescence may be fought.

WE DO NOT look upon public schools as we do upon industry, yet there are limitations that are common to both. An educational system that underpays or overworks its labor may have trouble with walkouts and will certainly have trouble with recruitment. Voters who won't pass bond issues or submit to higher school assessments are the equivalent of angry stockholders. Hence, it is not unreasonable to expect educators to seek among the successful devices of business some answers to their own problems.

Teaching is a form of salesmanship. Neither is adequately done by a mere recital of dull facts. Both require what we call impact. The best - sold customer is the one who becomes excited about the offered commodity or service, and identifies his welfare with its possession. The best - taught student is one who becomes excited about the subject and who sees in its mastery some relevance to his own welfare or happiness.

It is in this matter of impact that our schools are far behind proven techniques of salesmanship and advertising.

TAKE A HIGH SCHOOL course in Shakespeare. We have literally millions of students who are "taught" Shakespeare without ever having seen a Shakespearean play. Yet not fewer than five have been done magnificently for the screen. No student should ever finish the study of an act without watching an Olivier or a Gielgud do that act. Shakespeare can best be "sold" as high drama.

Modern language has too often been taught as an exercise of memory instead of a live method of communication. Some of our best schools have "language labs" in vocabulary and grammar. But few students are benefitted from langauge study unless they think it will be useful.

The French class of the future will use color motion picture travelogues containing printed French subtitles, keyed, of course, to the class level of proficiency. Students will simultaneously absorb, not merely the language, but a lot of geography and history.

THE DAY must come when the finest voices of the state will read English poetry to our kids. The nasal monotone of an ungifted classroom teacher can kill poetry, and often does. The day must come when no class in physics or chemistry will be without film clips showing the practical application of each rule or process, when biology will go far beyond dissected frogs and dramatically reveal life processes by animated diagrams and microscope photography.

"Teaching machines" and programed learning are in their infancy. There will be blind alleys, but any device that turns learning into a game has value. Machines are not available that can grade hundreds of multiple - choice examination papers in seconds. Much of the drudgery of teaching can now be avoided.

BEST OF ALL we can give education impact. Hollywood knows about impact. Madison Avenue knows about impact. Americans are the world's greatest salesmen. They are the matters of mass dramatics.

Instead of complaining that their students waste time staring at TV or going to the movies, let our educators rub the same lamp. We are now at the point where a million-dollar educational film would be a tremendous bargain if it could comprise one high school lecture series and be shown to tens of millions of students over a period of years.

Teachers can be stretched. Learning can be made more exciting. The imaginations of the bright can be stimulated and even the dull or the disadvantaged can be intrigued. We need no breakthroughs. All we need to use is the present state of the art of selling.

It is the education industry that needs to be dragged, kicking and screaming, into the last third of the twentieth century.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- France's Charles De Gaulle has been a victim of a Soviet "disinformation" ring, which has penetrated his inner circle and planted misleading intelligence upon him. No doubt this has contributed to his obsessive anti-American attitude.

For years, the U.S. government has been aware of the Soviet operation inside De Gaulle's entourage. The late President Kennedy tried to warn him, but the imperious French leader refused to believe that any of his trusted advisors would misinform him.

The amazing story has now been fictionalized by the celebrated author, Leon Uris, who had access to the facts. Although his new novel, "Topaz," will be offered as fiction, it is close to the truth. It will include a letter, for example, which is similar to the one Kennedy wrote to De Gaulle.

"We have been informed," states Uris's version of the letter, "of the existence of a vast espionage network of French citizens employed as agents of the Soviet Union... it appears they have been successful in deeply infiltrating all branches of government, particularly your secret service.

"Employing a unique method, termed 'disinformation,' they have been able to direct false information and confusing intelligence into your highest councils. It is further revealed to us by our same source that a member or members are among your personal entourage.

"I urge you to send a team of experts to the United States to study all the information we have gathered and to interrogate our prime source of discovery."

De Gaulle spurned the offer.

He isn't the only world leader, incidentally, who has been taken in by Soviet 'disinformation' rings. Other western governments also have been infiltrated by Communist agents and informants, who are less interested in collecting information than in circulating misinformation.

They have helped to create some elaborate misrepresentations, using false intelligence and forged documents.

Their favorite technique is to drop a tidbit here, a rumor there, a falsehood elsewhere, like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. Then western intelligence agencies painstakingly fit the puzzle together until it forms an identifiable pattern.

What they don't always realize is that they are assembling precisely the distorted picture the Reds want them to see.

Note: My first experience with a "disinformation" ring occurred in Shanghai after World War II. I helped to expose the operations of a "disinformation" specialist named Nichols Lebedeff, who planted falsehood fragments through a motley group of informants.

The girl friend of an American army officer would pass on one fragment. An entrepreneur, who had been shut up in the Jewish Ghetto by the Japanese during World War II, would divulge another. Still other bits and pieces would come from seemingly unrelated sources.

I remember one incident when U.S. army G-2 pieced fragments together and concluded that a Soviet ship was smuggling arms to the Communist underground. The army passed on the "intelligence" to the nationalist authorities, who raided the ship and found nothing more incriminating than a few empty vodka bottles. The incident caused Chiang Kai-Shek's government to lose considerable "face."

FOLEY'S WHITE ELEPHANT

Outside the office of Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., sits a new, 257-pound robotype machine that cost the taxpayers $800. Unless congress clears away the red tape, it will still be sitting there five years from now.

Foley purchased the machine out of his equipment allowance two months ago. No sooner had he installed it in his office than the house provided each congressman with a more efficient, more expensive mach 10 autotypist.

The new machine displaced the obsolete robotype, which Foley tried to turn over to the general services administration for use elsewhere or for sale at a government auction.

He was dismayed to discover that the law required him to keep the machine, whether it can be used or not, for five years. He thought about shipping it to his home office in Spokane, Wash., where it might come in handy. But the law also prohibited shipment of the machine outside the halls of congress.

So this is precisely where it remains -- in a congressional hallway where Foley is tempted to mount a sign above it declaring: "Rust in peace!"

William Penn Patrick, the right-wing cosmetics tycoon, has withdrawn his financial support of the movement to recall Senator Church of Idaho.

Patrick put up the money to circulate recall petitions. He also paid for an anti - church rabloid; and was ready to fork over another $1,600 a month for 30 anti - Church billboards throughout Idaho.

But the recall campaign backfired. Idahoans didn't like the idea of a Californian trying to get rid of their senator. Patrick apparently decided he was helping more than hurting Church. So he is now refusing to continue financing the campaign.

Inside Labor

West Berlin's New Mayor Calls For Closer Cooperation With the East.

Suddenly, this past year, West Berlin, the wall and the heartache of the divided city fell from the headlines. Some of the "quiet" is due to Vietnam. Some is due to former mayor Willy Brandt's moving up to the national capital as Deputy Chancellor.

There is a new governing mayor now -- Heinrich Albertz. No crisis has propelled him into the world news -- yet. But the outpost, 100 miles inside Soviet territory, is still there, grim wall and all.

But what of the new mayor? What are his views? I asked him. Here is his headling-making reply:

By Heinrich Albertz
Governing Mayor of West Berlin

West Berlin -- This city is no longer headline material for the world press. We have arrived at an apparent normalcy in the abnormality of the whole situation. This may reassure some people in the world, but it shouldn't lull us to sleep. That does not mean that we Berliners would like to cause a new crisis or to disturb or even torpedo the efforts of our friends to achieve a detente in Europe.

It does mean that Berlin needs a new role and task in the changed setting of world policies. We know that we will be understood in Washington when we keep reminding people there that the geographical position of this city in the heart of Germany and of Europe, which for so long seemed a handicap, now offers many opportunities for the future of Berlin, a future assured by the safe shield of American guarantees and the allied presence in the city.

We Berliners must safeguard our freedom in the confrontation with dictatorship in a new manner. We are no longer what used to be called the "Island in the Red Sea," but we are more or less that place in Europe which provides a test case for peaceful coexistence of the two social and economic systems.

We must divest ourselves of the obsession of thinking in terms of a fortress. With responsible initiatives, none of which would jeopardize our free existence, we should open up new tasks for our economy and our 2.2 million people.

At the same time we will not turn our backs on the task which confronts all Germans, namely, to strive for the unification of the two parts of our people through peaceful means and with untiring tenacity. We will continue to strive to make the Wall that divides Berlin as a continuing shame to 20th-century humanity, permeable by peaceful means so that the deep kinship of families can be maintained and the basis of our community as a people can be preserved.

We seek understanding among our friends, and among those who today still consider themselves our opponents, for our desire to work together with them for a peaceful Europe.

We live under the same sky. We are threatened by the same pollution of the air and water which is a consequence of industrial development. We all share the wish for better means of transportation, for better communication, for improved trade and for rising standards of living. We should exchange the results of our scientific progress and our technological development so that the growing population in all Europe can profit from the achievements of each country. These are tasks which we can begin at once, but which we can only solve together.

In such cooperative efforts the question of different political views does not arise. They are incidental. They can be set aside for we well know that a joint attack on air pollution does not eliminate political differences. But the human contact, the common effort for the welfare of the individual and of nations diminishes tensions and makes it possible to talk freely about problems which up until now have been treated by each side as taboos.

We are prepared to offer better opportunities for travel, for freedom of movement, for the elimination of passes and identity cards, and for the unobstructed reunion of families. We are prepared for better cooperation in the fields of trade, of communication, of science, of technology and of cultural exchange. We are also prepared to seriously consider other proposals which would serve the end of working together.

If we succeed in tackling and solving these problems in the heart of Europe, then Berlin will have found its new place in a changing world. We count on our American friends. Without their help this new bridge in Europe will not have strong pillars.

Buried in the beautiful Black Hills of South Dakota are some mighty weapons of the free world, the Minuteman missile system. While receiving training as a launch officer in California prior to being stationed at the missile base, I often wondered if the sudden addition of this nuclear complex had had any noticeable effects on South Dakotans. I soon found out.

Upon arriving in Rapid City, S.D., I entered a bank to open a checking account. A young bank employe, charged with setting up the account, asked my occupation.

"Minuteman officer," I replied.

The young man looked at me incredulously. Then he asked, "All the way from Concord?"

Exercise Helps Maintain Figure

By Mrs. Mattie E. Aslin
Extension Home Economist

KENNETT -- It's a lot easier to keep a slim, trim figure than it is to go on a strict reducing diet and lose weight. A slim figure helps you feel and look younger.

Exercise -- or physical activity -- is an ally in holding weight and in losing it. If you exercise less you must eat less to hold your weight, say nutrition experts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Long hours of strenous exercise are not necessary to keep weight under control. Regular, less - strenous exercise can be effective for those who should take it easier, and want to maintain weight or lose it while eating enough food to be satisified.

Take, for example, an overweight woman whose daily food provides her with just enough calories to maintain her weight. If she decreases by one hour daily the time spent in activities she does while sitting and spends this time in moderately active work around the house, she increases the calories used by the body by about 90 a day. She will lose about nine pounds in a year if she continues to eat as she has been eating and makes no other changes in her activities.

If she takes a second hour every day and shifts from activities done while sitting to active recreation, she will use an additional 170 calories a day.

Use seasonal foods with shelf foods for a nutritional main dish.

BAKED LIMA BEANS AND TOMATOES

Lima beans are plentiful and here's a new way to serve this thrifty favorite. It's protein rich and you can make it a main dish. To add a liberal amount of animal protein to the meal, why not serve baked custard or a pie or pudding made with egg as your desserts. These desserts also are thrifty, as eggs are so favorably priced this season.

Lima beans, cooked (about 1-½ cups dry) 4 cups
Tomatoes, canned, 1 pound - 2 cups
Onion, chopped - ¼ cup
Brown sugar - ¼ cup
Chili powder - ½ teaspoon
Vinegar - 1 tablespoon
Salt - 1-½ teaspoons
Bacon, finely chopped - 3 slices

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Combine ingredients, except bacon, in a 1-½ quart casserole. Sprinkle bacon on top. Bake 1-½ hours.

Menu Suggestion -- Serve with asparagus, head lettuce salad, and custard pie.

A regiment from Alabama was assigned to McCoy, and, as was the practice, sent an advance unit to assure that housing and mess facilities were in readiness. The day the advance unit arrived at camp, the temperature was a penetrating 20 degrees below zero.

About ten o'clock that morning, the shivering sergeant in charge of the advance unit asked if he could step into my office to warm up. After looking out the window at the bleak scene for some moments, he turned to me and asked, "Do people live around heah when there ain't no wahr?" Matt N. Marx

My son Bob, stationed in Norfolk, Va., lived next door to one of his buddies. The wives of both were to have babies about the same time, so the boys had agreed that if one was on duty when the time came, the other would take the expectant mother to the hospital.

Bob's baby came first. He was at home at the time, took his wife to the hospital and behaved in the usual manner of a young husband with his first child. A week later, when his friend's wife showed signs of imminent delivery, Bob was on hand to take her to the hospital. He thought he should stay awhile, so he sat in the waiting room and took a nap. After a bit, he awoke to find two nurses standing before him.

"Weren't you in here just last week?" one of them asked accusingly.

"Yes," said Bob unconcernedly. "But that was my wife!"

Groucho Marx' Daughter to Wed French Clerk

ST. DENIS, France (AP) — A month before his planned marriage to Groucho Marx' daughter, Melinda, 21-year-old Jacques Guilloux has quit his job as a $40-a-week town clerk and says: "We're going to travel. Maybe for five years."

"First to America to see her father," he added. "Then to Asia. I want to see how people live there. After that? We'll see."

Guilloux, who has long sideburns and speaks a little English, said Friday he met Miss Marx, also 21, on a kibbutz in Israel last month and "it was love at first sight."

He said his fiancee now speaks "40 words of French, which is better than when I met her. Then she spoke only 10 words of French."

Anyway, he said, "we get along well. We understand each other."

Although an interview had been arranged in advance, Miss Marx declined to talk to a reporter.

"You know women," Guilloux said.

"Maybe if you come back tomorrow she'll talk to you," he added. "I'm sure she will."

Guilloux has an apartment in a public housing project in the industrial suburb of St. Denis, north of Paris.

A TIME EXPOSURE TO GOD

There is an advantage in Christian Conversion being well-defined. But no matter how striking our first encounter with God may have been we all begin the Christian life as baby Christians. It takes time to become mature. It requires more than instant exposure to take the Lord's picture on the human heart. But the time-exposure will do it. You need to make worship a regular part of your life. There is one means by which you can become a Calmer, more Christ-like person. Why not begin Sunday?

Astros, Seventh Straight Victim

By the Associated Press

The vise-tight pennant race so long a trademark of the National League has been only a hazy memory this August, and the St. Louis Cardinals seem determined to keep it that way.

The red-hot Cardinals spun off their seventh straight victory Friday night, whipping Houston 5-3 on Steve Carlton's six-hitter. The victory ballooned the Cards' league lead to 11 1/2 games.

St. Louis has shattered the race with a torried 13-4 pace this month. They led by just 3 1/2 games as the month began, but won five straight games and have been just about unstoppable ever since.

Carlton struck out 11 Friday night and didn't allow a hit after the sixth inning. Julian Javier and Mike Shannon handled the hitting, each smashing a home run and driving in a pair of runs. Shannon's 10th and Javier's 12th of the season.

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago tripped Philadelphia 3-1, Pittsburgh pounded New York 7-2, San Francisco stopped Cincinnati 3-1 and Los Angeles downed Atlanta 5-1.

Shannon's fourth-inning homer was the first hit off Houston's Mike Cuellar. After Tim McCarver reached on an error, Javier unloaded and the Cards had a 3-0 lead.

Bob Aspromonte's two-run double rocked Carlton in the sixth, but the young left-hander settled down and did not allow another hit. The victory ran his record to 11-6.

Dick Hughes, 11-4 will try to pitch the Cards to their eight straight at Houston tonight against Astros rookie Don Wilson, 8-8.

Rookie left-hander Jim Ellis won his first major league game and halted a four-game Chicago losing streak as the Cubs dropped the Phillies.

Ellis, recalled from Tacoma August 10, worked into the seventh inning before giving way to Chuck Hartenstein. Glenn Beckert drove in two Chicago runs as the Cubs beat ex-teammate Larry Jackson.

Bob Veale hurled a seven-hiter and Willie Stargell reached Forbes Field's distant right field roof for the second time this season as Pittsburgh pounded the Mets.

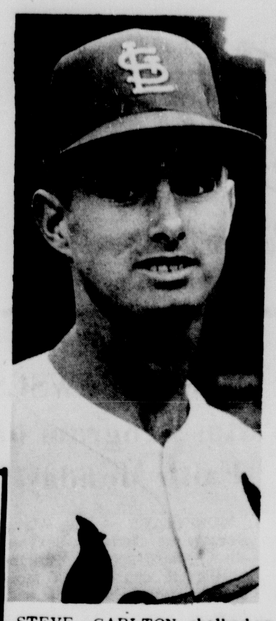
Stargell's fourth inning homer - his 17th of the year - was only the 12th to go over the roof in Forbes Field's 59-year history. Stargell is the first player ever to put two in that sector in one season.

Ray Sadecki hurled a six-hitter and Jesus Alou lined four hits and drove in two runs as the Giants dropped the Reds.

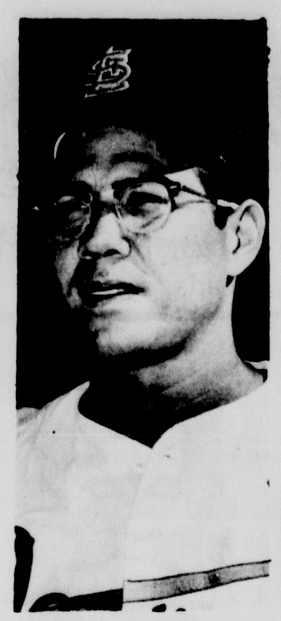
Willie Mays' fifth inning single snapped a 1-1 tie and Alou's fourth hit of the game brought in another Giant run in the eighth as San Francisco beat Milt Pappas, 12-8. Sadecki is 5-4.

Lou Johnson slammed two home runs and Don Drysdale won his first game since July 15 as the Dodgers sunk the Braves.

Johnson connected in the first and fourth innings against loser Denny Lemaster and then walked and scored in the Dodgers' three-run wrapup rally in the sixth.

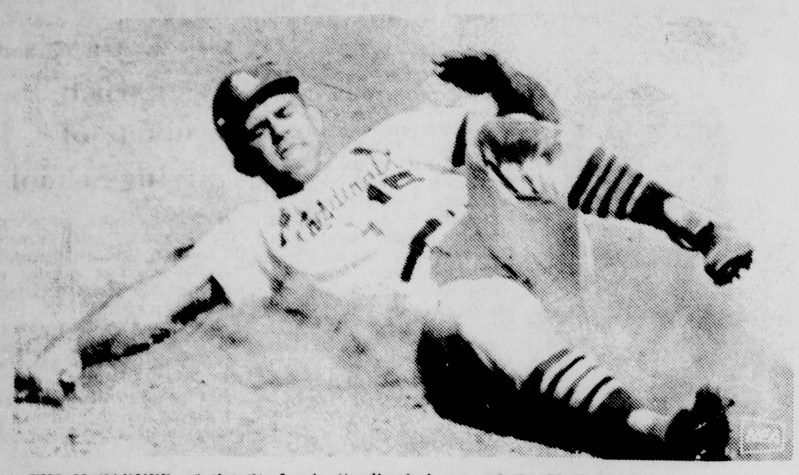


STEVE CARLTON chalked up his 11th season victory last night by posting a six-hit, 5-3, victory over Houston in the Astrodome. He had 11 strikeouts.



JULIAN JAVIER blasted his 12th homer of the season last night, enabling the Cardinals to streak to its seventh straight victory. The Cards won, 5-3.

MIKE SHANNON cracked his 10th homer of the season as the Cards beat Houston 5-3 last night to move out into an 11 1/2 game lead. It was the Birds seventh straight win.



TIM McCARVER of the St. Louis Cardinals is one of the National League's leading hitters. Since he's on base so often, Tim scores his share of runs, too. Like this one.

Foresters Drop Extra Inning Duel in In Series

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Bridgeport, Conn., gets a day off today to recuperate from an eight-inning victory in the opening round of Connie Mack baseball world series in Farmington.

The Yankees made nine errors but remained composed enough to gain a 5-4 victory over Sikeston, Mo., in the regularly scheduled seven-inning game Friday night.

Portland, Ore., joined Bridgeport in the winners bracket with a 6-4 victory against Nashville, Tenn., in the double-elimination tournament.

Sikeston and Nashville meet at 9:30 p.m. tonight in a losers bracket game.

Bridgeport third baseman John Slosar ended the three-hour, 15-minute game with a single in the bottom half of the eighth0 inning, scoring Rich Mariconda, who had singled and taken second after losing pitcher Gene Walker hit a batter.

Sox Slugger Felled, Out Three Weeks

By the Associated Press

The only hit the California Angels could make for 6 1-3 innings Friday night was one by their pitcher and it's still got the Boston Red Sox plenty worried.

In the fourth inning of Boston's 3-2 victory, Angel starter Jack Hamilton felled Boston slugger Tony Conigliaro by hitting him with a pitch on the left temple and knocking him unconscious.

Conigliaro was rushed to the hospital where the diagnosis was a cracked cheek bone, severe nasal hemorrhage and three weeks out of the line-up. The first two will bother Tony, but the Red Sox, still fighting for the American League pennant, are sure to feel the effects of the latter.

Gary Bell stopped California without a hit until with one out in the seventh inning, Jimmie Hall hit his 14th homer over the left-field screen. Hall followed with another homer in the ninth.

Bell led the Boston hitting attack, too, connecting for a double and a run-scoring single. Rico Petrocelli tripled in another run and scored on a bad relay throw to the plate by Jim Fregosi.

In other American League games, New York and Minnesota split a twi-night doubleheader 1-0 and 3-4, Washington edged Kansas City 7-6, Detroit stopped Cleveland 4-0 in a rain-shortened affair and Chicago split with Baltimore, winning 3-1 before losing 8-2.

Joe Pepitone drove in a run with a single in the first inning of the Twins-Yankees opener and Steve Barber made it stand up the rest of the game, shutting out the Twins on six hits.

The Yanks were winning the nightcap 3-2 behind Fred Talbot's five-hit pitching, when Rich Reese turned things around with a two-run pinch homer in the ninth. Harmon Killebrew drove in two runs with sacrifice flies.

Tim Cullen's three run homer in the ninth inning boosted the Senators past Kansas City. Jim Hunter and Ken Harrelson each had two runs batted in for the Athletics, and Paul Casanova hit a three-run shot for Washington.

Eddie Mathews drove in a run in his debut with Detroit, and Mickey Lolich stopped Cleveland on four hits before the rains came. Mathews' RBI came on a single in the second inning as he started at third for the injured Don Wert.

The first game at Chicago seemed as if it might never start — a two-hour rain delay slowed things considerably — and the second game seemed as if it might never end. The final out was registered at 1:36 a.m. CDT.

Pete Ward's two-run homer was the deciding factor in the opener and Curt Blefary's three-run homer keyed a five-run Baltimore third in the nightcap.

Clay Married In Chicago, Second Trip For Ex-Champ

CHICAGO (AP) — Cassius Clay was married in a quiet ceremony Friday night, entertained a few friends and relatives at a reception, then took his 17-year-old bride on a surprise, friendly visit to neighbors.

The 25-year-old prize fighter, recently stripped of his heavyweight title, and Belinda Boyd were wed in Clay's South Side home in a Black Muslim ceremony.

Originally scheduled for Sunday, the wedding was quickly arranged Friday and was closed to the press.

The deposed champion, who prefers his Black Muslim name of Muhammad Ali, said he had been romantically interested in his new wife for more than a year. The bride is the oldest of four children of Raymond Boyd, of suburban Blue Island, himself a Muslim.

The wedding was attended by the bride's parents, but Clay's mother and father flew in from Louisville, Ky., too late to witness the ceremony.

Miss Boyd wore the simple, floor-length white dress and veil used by female Muslims, while the boxer was attired in a black tuxedo jacket.

"It was a very small wedding," Clay said after the ceremony.

Clay was indefinite about honeymoon plans, implying that he planned to stay in Chicago for at least a day or two. However, a member of his training camp, Gene Mason, said that Clay and his bride would be on their way to Hawaii today.

Clay politely sidestepped questions about his immediate plans and took leave of reporters when he spied three elderly persons on the stairs of the house across the street.

"Excuse me, I'm going to say hello to my neighbors," he said. "I've just moved in and I haven't met any of them yet."

Clay is appealing a prison term he received for refusing to take the military draft oath. He contended he could not take the oath on the grounds that he is a Black Muslim minister.

It was the second marriage for Clay who was divorced from Sonji M. Roi, 27, a former model, last year. Clay said that the marriage was dissolved because his first wife would not become a member of the Muslims and live up to the sect's religious code.

"It may be argued that any legislation that would reduce the number of pistols in circulation would substantially reduce the number of aggravated assults. The argument rests on two mistaken premises. First, it assumes that restrictive legislation will prevent criminals from obtaining guns. The fact is that experience has shown that legislation such as the New York Sullivan Law does not reduce the number of pistols in the hands of criminals. Second, the argument assumes that guns are used in most aggravated assults, whereas the fact is that they are used in only a small percentage of such assaults."

DON'T YOU READ BEFORE YOU BUY?

Where but in print can you get so close to the advertising messages that interest you? Where else can a woman clip the coupons and recipes that intrigue her? Or tear out tips to try on leftovers? Or mark, for future marketing, any of the colorful food ideas which strike her fancy?
And where else can she circle and compare the colors and styles of clothing and furnishings that appeal to her?
Where else, in fact, can any message be re-run at will by an interested audience?
So make sure a good part of your advertising message gets into print. Let somebody's eyes linger over it as long as they like. Let somebody's scissors clip it free of competition. And then watch someone's pocket or purse carry it to the place of purchase. Print makes sense because print makes sales.

"IN MY FIRST YEAR AS A SWIFT HOMES DEALER, I NETTED OVER $26,000!"

Fred Kessler, owner of Kessler-Swift Homes in New England, had his own engineering and manufacturing firm for many years. "But the profit squeeze was getting tighter and tighter," he says. "I wasn't clearing enough money for all the headaches."

After he learned about Swift Homes, he sold the business and applied for a Swift franchise in a portion of New Hampshire and Vermont. Now he and his wife, Florence, work together, clear more than they did with his previous business and have time to enjoy the resort area in which they live.

"We're looking forward to a greater second year," Fred says. "The housing business in general is better than it was our first year. The special Swift features are so appealing to customers that we really see no ceiling on this new career."

Maybe you have a business that doesn't reward you enough. Or maybe you're working for someone else and would like the challenge and prestige of being a Swift Homes dealer. Send the coupon below to find out more about this exciting opportunity.

SWIFT HOMES OFFER . . . Complete Merchandising Program; beautiful line of year-round and vacation pre-cut homes; advertising and promotion help; an AAA-1 Dun and Bradstreet rating. LONG-TERM FINANCING FOR YOUR CUSTOMERS AT NO MONEY DOWN.

Ann Landers

Woman With Unruly Child Needs to Get Outside Help

Dear Ann Landers: I hate to admit that a three-year-old child has me over a barrel, but I am completely defeated.

The man I married was left with this youngster. Jim's wife walked out when the boy was six months old. Jim's mother took the boy for a year and then Jim hired a housekeeper. When I married Jim I was thrilled to be a mother to this child. Now I'm a nervous wreck.

The child chews holes in everything, breaks toys, destroys furniture, refuses to play with other children, won't watch anything but adult TV programs and insists on going everywhere we go.

I have tried to reason with the boy but he acts as if he doesn't hear me when I speak to him. I have explained that his real mother wouldn't cook for him or his daddy, that she didn't love him as I do and that she finally ran away and left him.

Jim says the boy realizes I am not his real mother and that is why he refuses to accept me. Please tell me how I can be a real mother to this boy.
---WABASH BLUES

Dear Wabash: You need outside help and fast. The boy is frightfully insecure, and you haven't helped matters by telling him his real mother didn't love him and that she ran away from him.

Have the child's pediatrician check the child's hearing, his metabolism---the works. Then learn where to take the boy for evaluation. This youngster has emotional problems. You cannot handle him alone.

Dear Ann Landers: I come from an average American middle class family. We ate off oilcloth and mismatched dishes. Mom never bought glasses. We used jelly and cheese jars. She was a good mother and I am not criticizing her, just stating facts.

When I married, I decided to do things nicer than my mother ----not because I wanted to put on the dog but because I believe people should uplift themselves if they can. My married sisters are still setting their tables like Mom----jelly glasses and sometimes newspapers instead of oilcloth. I am not criticizing them, either. I say, "To each his own."

Next month two nieces are getting married. Their mothers (my sisters with the newspapers) have suggested that I buy a place setting of china or a setting of sterling silver for wedding gifts. The china is $50 a place setting. The silver is $62. I am in favor of people bettering themselves, but don't you think this is a lot of nerve?---UNCERTAIN KIN

Dear Kin: It was only a suggestion, and you can ignore it. As for "nerve," as one who believes in "uplifting" you should be happy that the younger generation plans to do things a little nicer than their mothers did.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read a letter in your column from a teen-ager. You answered: "I will be happy to listen to you any time you want to unload. That's what I'm here for."

Your answer touched me so that I cried. How wonderful to know there is somebody in this world a kid can count on. Yes, I know there are psychiatrists and counselors that will help, but you are more real. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for being there and caring.---A BUFFALO TEEN

Dear Teen: Thanks for letting me know I'm getting through. Your letter was a day-brightener.

Do you feel ill at ease---out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Offer to Buy House Valid when Accepted

By Jack Strauss, LL.B

Dick mailed Mr. Maxwell an offer to buy the latter's house. Overwhelmed by Dick's generosity, Mr. Maxwell lost no time in mailing Dick an acceptance. Before Dick received it, however, he reviewed his offer and he too became overwhelmed by his generosity. So much so, in fact, that he raced to the nearest telephone and attempted to withdraw it.

"It's too late," was Mr. Maxwell's answer. "I already mailed my acceptance."

"Maybe you did," Dick was willing to concede, "but I haven't yet received it. Therefore, I'm still free to cancel my offer."

Mr. Maxwell disagreed and took Dick to court to compel him to go through with the deal.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Dick to duck out of his generous offer?

This is how the judge ruled: Dick was bound by his offer. The judge held that an offer can be cancelled anytime before it is accepted. But, an offer is generally deemed accepted when the acceptance is mailed and not when it is received.

PCA Directors Hear Speech by FCA Governor

Directors of the Sikeston Production Credit Association attended a press conference in St. Louis Tuesday for R. B. Tootell, Washington, D. C., governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

The average investment per farm worker in the United States has reached $41,000--more than twice the amount for workers in industry. On commercial family farms, investment per worker is nearer $100,000," Tootell said.

"Higher interest rates have not reduced the farmers' demands and the Farm Credit System last year borrowed a record $10 1/2 billion, while the Federal land banks lent $5.3 billion.

"Farmers borrowed $5.1 billion from their 463 PCAs nationally, a 13 per cent increase. Farmer's marketing and bank cooperatives also showed a 12 per cent increase on farm credits in spite of the tight money crises."

Sikeston PCA board members attending were Carl B. Raidt, Sikeston; Paul Bradley, Kewanee; Charles Causey, Bloomfield; Lester H. Bishop, East Prairie and Otto Lape, Bell City; and associate directors, Pervis Sebaugh, Daisy; and Louis Kalkbrenner, Poplar Bluff, and the PCA office staff, manager, Thatcher Scism, Wallace Waters and Kenneth Williams, all of Sikeston.

Director and Agricultural Agent

BENTON -- If you are going to be seeding new pastures or renovating old pastures during August or early September one of the important decisions that you have to make is just what seeding mixture you will use.

Most every farm has a need for different mixtures in different pasture fields. There are a number of things that you need to consider in selecting your grasses and legumes to seed if you want to avoid ending up with a pasture that doesn't give you the kind of grazing you want when you want it.

1. How well are the various grasses and legumes adapted to the soils in your fields -- and to the climate in your area?
2. Do you intend to use them not only for pasture but sometimes for hay, silage, green chop or a combination of these uses?
3. What type of livestock do you plan to graze the pasture?
4. What time of the season will you most need the pasture?
5. Just how much pasture and forage in total will you need for your livestock operation?

Generally, you will want at least one grass and one legume in your mixture. The legumes may last only a few years under grazing, but while you have them they will furnish some nitrogen for the grass, will help spread grazing through more of the season, and will improve grazing quality.

When the legume does thin, you will need to depend on the longer lived grass and nitrogen in your topdressings of fertilizer for continued high production.

The grasses that generally fit best in pasture mixture in Southeast Missouri are tall fescue, orchardgrass, bromegrass, timothy, and in some cases Reed's canary grass.

Alfalfa, birdsfoot trefoil, ladino clover, and lespedeza need to be considered among the legumes.

When you have all these things to consider in selecting the best pasture mixture or mixture for your own situations you can see it is not a simple matter. This is one reason that your University of Missouri College of Agriculture has developed a Missouri Livestock Forage Manual and has them available in your County University Extension Center. This manual contains information that will enable you to study for your own livestock forage program on your farm so you can pick the pasture mixture that best fits your needs. Your County Extension Center also has a number of MU Guides on various grasses and legumes that should be helpful. You will want to ask especially for Guide 4010 "Seeding Rates for Field Crops, Pasture Mixtures" and Guide 4650, "How to Establish Pastures".

COVERS FOR TRENCH SILOS

With ensiling time approaching, many farmers are asking about covers for trench silos.

If you want to reduce spoilage in a bunker or trench silo, it's necessary to distribute the silage and thoroughly pack it with a tractor as it goes into the silo. As the silo filling is completed, round up the center section so drainage will occur. Thoroughly pack again with the tractor and immediately cover with black poly-ethylene or dark colored poly-vinyl. This plastic should be in one piece wide enough to cover the entire surface of the silage.

Thicknesses of eight, six and four-mil plastic are available. The eight-mil stands a better chance of being in a condition to use more than one year . . . but so many things can happen to plastic in its use that many people prefer to buy the lower life and lower cost six or four-mil thickness and use it only one year.

To be effective . . . Ricketts says the plastic must be weighted down . . . especially at the edges and preferably all over the surface. This is to prevent air from getting under the plastic. Lime dust, saw dust, or even earth can be used for this job.

Plastic properly applied to exclude air from the silage will more than pay for the plastic material and the labor of application each year.

BENTON -- Is there a piece of beautiful furniture somewhere in your home hiding its beauty under old wax or finish? Well, now is the time to put a little effort forward to let that piece show off its beauty.

Refinishing old furniture or finishing new furniture is a hobby that many people enjoy. To see the beauty of the color and grain of the wood is one of the real joys of finishing and refinishing.

However, there are certain types of furniture where it is not wise to refinish. For example, furniture that is not worth refinishing.

Furniture is valuable if it is well constructed of good wood, not merely if it is old. Refinishing furniture whether it is an old article or a modern piece, requires time, energy, patience, and some expense. A piece of furniture worth reclaiming is made of good wood, is well designed, well constructed, and serves a practicaly use in the home. If the piece has these essentials, the finished result will be worth the time and effort required for refinishing. If not, it might be wise to use other furniture rather than trying to refinish the piece that does not meet these standards.

Some furniture simply needs a good cleaning job whether the furniture has a smooth or hard finish. For general cleaning why not try this mixture of:

1 tablespoons turpentine
3 tablespoons boiled linseed oil
1 quart hot water

The turpentine and boiled linseed oil can be purchased at most paint or hardware stores. This mixture must be kept hot as you use it. Using a clean cloth, wet it in the solution and rub it on the section of furniture at a time. Then polish with a dry clean cloth. In this mixture the turnpentine serves to cut the dirt, while the oil lubricates and polishes the wood.

This mixture SHOULD NOT be used on a shellac finish as the water may cause it to spot or turn white. A worn shellac finish should usually be removed, and the article refinished. To determine whether or not the finish is shellac, rub a small area on the underneath side of the piece with denatured alcohol. If the finish is shellac, it will soften.

When your furniture has been thoroughly cleaned, protect it with a good polish or wax.

To list all the steps in refinishing an article would be a long process. May we suggest instead that if you are about to begin to refinish or are interested in refinishing, that you write your University of Missouri Extension Center to send you a copy of Bulleting C-829 titled "Preparing Furniture for Refinishing."

This excellent bulletin will give you advice on how to remove old finishes, make necessary repairs, raise dents, fill cracks and holes, remove dark spots, sand, stain and apply a filler. It will help you add beauty to your room by helping to restore beauty to your furniture.

Farm Management News

By

RICHARD F. McINTOSH

Extension Area Farm Management Agent

BENTON -- How many test plots on fertility, varieties, crop rotation irrigation, drainage, etc., are you conducting on your farm?

Whether by design or accident, you probably have several such plots.

Why not take the time to record the yield figures on fields which have been handled differently this year. This information will facilitate applying dollar and cents figures to what some of these practices may have been worth. Consequently, you should be better informed for planning next year's cropping practices.

I am sure you are aware of the shortcomings of only one year's yields, but by the same token you must record yields the first year before you can have a two, three or four year average.

What are some of the things to check?

1. Soybean following a crop which was fertilized last year as compared to continuous soybeans.
2. Yields from well limed fields as compared to yields low in limestone.
3. Soybeans following a fertilized cotton crop that was destroyed as compared to continuous soybeans.
4. Crop yields on graded soil whether or not it was irrigated as compared to ungraded and non - irrigated crops.
5. Further additions to this list should include yield differences among crop varieities, herbicides, insecticides, etc.

Undoubtedly you can make several additions to this list.

Many of you have these variations in fertilizer usage, varieties, herbicides, etc., in the same field on the same soil type.

Harvest is less than a month away on corn and not much farther away on soybeans. So, now is the time to work out the details in order to record these yields and not seriously delay harvesting rates.

Cigarettes Stolen

A total of 249 package of cigarettes were reported stolen from a vending machine at the 21 Club, 1141 West Malone. The theft was reported to police Friday.

Entry was gained through a window on the southeast side of the building. The machine had been pryed with a small round object, police said.

In other activity, a car driven by Linda Kay Francis, 18, 722 Delmar, struck a parked car owned by Ronald E. Lee, 314 Hardin, at 2:31 a.m. today. The Lee vehicle was parked at his residence at the time of the accident. Miss Francis suffered a cut lip from the impact.

Matthews Officials Working to Correct 'Bad' Tasting, Discolored City Water

MATTHEWS – Acknowledging that city water left something to be desired, Mayor Harold Burch and the city council today appealed for patience while they worked on a solution. They described the water's taste and color as "bad."

Cost of any corrective undertaking was cited as a reason why there had not been earlier action.

Public attention was called to the city's discolored water in a Daily Standard news story July 16 by R. E. Hartline, a resident who complained about broken water mains in the neighborhood.

"The water is inspected by the state board of health and is sampled monthly," a statement by the mayor and council reported. "This does not mean the water is not terrible tasting to most people and is not discolored to some degree.

"When the well was first put in use, eight years ago, the water had a fairly good taste and was not discolored. After a year or so the water began to change. We have been told that this can happen to any water stream on the Sikeston ridge because of the subsoil texture.

"At present we have over 150 houses that are users of city water. All of these users have bad water because of the taste and color. This water is not poisonous."

Answering their own question why the aldermen didn't "fix the water," the statement continued:

"At the time the city voted to put in city water there had to be voted a tax increase. Before this there was $.60 per $100 evaluation tax. The increase that was voted on was $1.50 bringing our present tax to $2.10 per $100. Our bonds for this project amounted to a total of $98,000 to be paid off by 1979. Anyone who knows anything about money, interest and payments knows that a city of 450 residents was loaded. At this time there was no federal aid available.

"Almost all the water users in Matthews know that up to now it has been impossible to do anything about the water. A large number of residents have purchased automatic water softeners to improve their water. These softeners are expensive, but the cost of a community water filtering system is in excess of $40,000.

"There are a few residents in our city that tend to be critical of the way things are now. They would like to bring disgrace to our city with their accusations and threats. We are afraid that they will only hurt themselves.

"Four months ago we began studying our financial situation to see if there was any way of financing a water filtering system. We have met with our bonding company, our engineers, and have talked with the Farmers Home Administration.

"There is a good possibility that we can get enough federal aid to make it possible for us to install the filtering system plus a sewage disposal system. Both of these systems are much needed in our city. Both systems would increase property value in our city. With these improvements we would attract more residents to our city and would be likely to attract some industry. We can expand with a new addition that we have discussed.

"We know we need to improve our water system. We are working toward a solution of our problems. We are asking the cooperation of all the residents of Matthews. With your cooperation we will work diligently to improve this situation."

Matthews councilmen are Ralph Faries, Harlan Gilmer, Gene Curtis and Ellis Reed.

Speaker Stresses Three Needs of Negroes

Three ingredients were outlined to Sikeston Negroes as a prescription for victory by National Association for the Advancement of Colored People leader Gloster B. Current, New York City, in a meeting Friday night at the Community Action Agency.

No miracle drug is prescribed for the ills of this community, Current said. The recovery may resemble the recovery from tuberculosis. It will take patience and rest. It may require an operation, but a cure is in the offing.

What you must do to fill the prescription, Current continued, is first become a registered voter. As part of the NAACP summer project in Sikeston, workers have been reviewing the registration rolls and urging those persons who need to be registered to do so.

It is only when you have the power to vote that the politicians will listen, Current said.

As an example, Current continued, why doesn't Howardsville, a Negro community near the hometown of the governor, have a fire truck?

Furthermore, why doesn't the governor do something about it, he posed.

If you are registered voters and you ask the governor to do something about it, he'll listen to you. And if nothing is done he'll hear from you in November, he said.

The second main ingredient, Current said, is to motivate youth to stay in school as long as they can.

Businesses everywhere are looking for an "instant Negro" who is qualified, Current said. But the youths have to stay in school and obtain a degree, before the doors of opportunity will open, he said.

The third and most important ingredient for victory is to keep trying, he said. Don't feel defeated when progress is slow. Keep fighting for your freedom, believe in it and act accordingly.

Current warned the audience to beware of "quacks" who prescribe violence and riots as remedies to the social ills.

The persons who suffer most from riots and violence are the Negroes, he said. It is their community that is burned. The businesses that served them move out, because they no longer can obtain insurance.

Current said the progress has to come through the democratic system, and this is a slow process. It requires conferences, debate, examination, discussion and persistence for just a little progress.

President Johnson has done more for the Negroes than anyone ever expected, Current said. "He is one of, if not the most, progressive President we have had," he continued.

The federal government is doing much to make equality a reality through legislation, Current said.

Current's speech came at the midpoint of the NAACP's summer

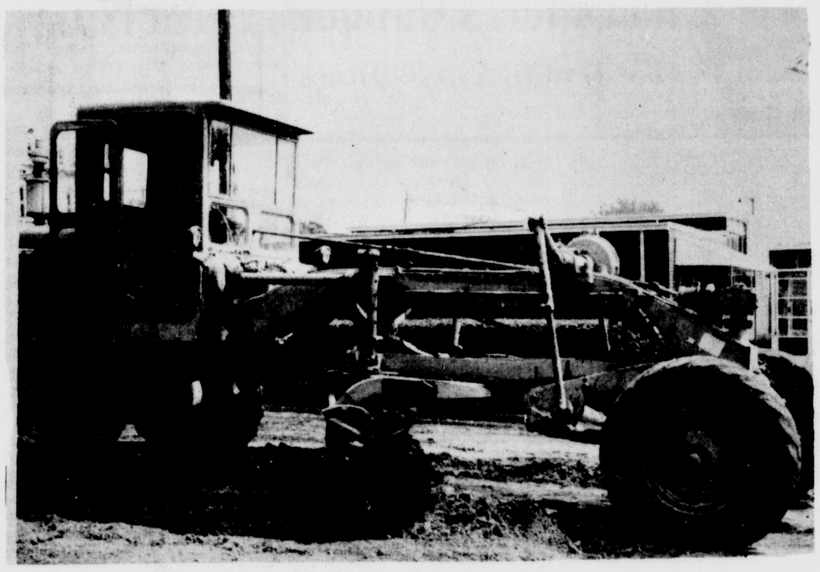
IMPROVEMENTS were made at the police station. New sidewalks were built. The parking lot is being resurfaced. A new awning was installed to replace the one damaged in a storm this summer, and touch up painting and trimming has been done around the building.



THE SURFACE of the police department parking lot was graded and mixed with oil by city street department workers. The surface is a hot blade mix, similar to asphalt.

Four Injured in Two Collisions

Four were injured in traffic accidents Friday at Marston and near Hayti.

In a four-car collision Friday at 8:45 p.m. on highway 61, three miles north of Hayti, John Smith, 57, Caruthersville and his wife, Gladys, 51, were injured when their 1951 Studebaker pickup truck slowed and was struck in the rear by a 1965 Volkswagen, driven by Judith Hart, 26, St. Louis, who struck a 1963 Buick, driven by Doyle Gross, 28, McCalla, Ala. The Volkswagen then hit the left side of a 1958 Ford, driven by Hiram Beck.

Smith received a sprained neck and body bruises, and Mrs. Smith, a head bump. Both were taken to the Pemiscot County Memorial hospital in Hayti.

Friday at 7:05 p.m. on highway 61, at the south edge of Marston, Philip Sinan, Jr., 35, Westchester, Ohio, was hurt critically in a two-car collision. He is in the Pemiscot County Memorial hospital with a skull fracture, concussion, chest injuries and face cuts.

Driving a 1966 Ford he attempted to pass a tractor trailer on a curve, causing a 1966 pickup truck driven by William McKernan, 57, NEW Haven, to go to the shoulder, where it was struck by the Sinan car when the driver lost control.

McKennan received head cuts and fractured ribs. He was taken to the Hayti hospital.

Refugee Flow Stirs Bitterness

ALLENBY BRIDGE, Israeli-hold Jordan (AP)— Israel and Jordan traded charges of inefficiency in the repatriation of Jordanians to Israeli-held Jordan after only 355 refugees got home Friday.

The Red Cross had said about 1,000 would make the first crossings at what is left of Allenby Bridge and another bridge at Umm As-Shurat, 10 miles to the north.

Jordan has announced that 167,500 of the more than 200,000 Arabs who fled their homeland as Israeli troops seized the western bank of the Jordan River in the June 5-10 war want to be repatriated. But Israel says it doubts whether more than 35,000 can return before the Aug. 31 deadline Israel has set.

The crossings were halted today because Saturday is the Jewish Sabbath. If they are also halted next Saturday, Aug. 26, that would leave just 10 days more for repatriation.

Bitter feelings have already cropped up on both sides.

"The Jordanian organization let us down badly," said an Israeli interior ministry spokesman of Friday's repatriation. "It is apparently just not equipped to handle a project of this size."

But Jordanian officials complained that the names of those eligible to cross had been turned in by Israel only Thursday— too late to organize the refugees efficiently.

Most of the first refugees were women, children and bent old men in long robes. This led the secretary of Jordan's refugee committee, Brig. Abdullah Rafee, to comment: "It seems the Israelis have selected only the very young and very old and have taken no chances on letting young men return yet."

Roland Troyon, a Red Cross official, said it would take six months to complete the repatriation at the present rate. But the Red Cross hopes to step up the flow of refugees to 4,000 a day next week.

City Manager W. Raymert Miller Succeeds Monsignor McGrane as Recovery Pilot

City Manager W. Raymert Miller was elected chairman of Recovery Inc. by its executive committee Friday night in the city administration building.

The former chairman the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter J. McGrane submitted his resignation after being assigned to Aurora parish. He was pastor of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church.

Recovery Inc., is composed of ministers and church laymen. It's main purpose is to improve substandard housing and aiding Negroes in finding jobs.

A tentative operating budget of $50,000 has been set as a goal.

Members of the finance committee reported that a letter urging the moral support of all churches for the project will be mailed to pastors next week. They suggested that each church endorsing the plan appoint one members to serve as a liaison between the church and Recovery Inc.

How the money is collected in each church will be up to each church leader, but a single Sunday is planned for soliciting donations.

Dr. Robert E. Lively Jr., pastor of Trinity Baptist Church, chairman of the community betterment committee of the organization, reported on plans.

W. Raymert Miller

Dr. Lively said that Community Action Agency has obtained information on the condition of houses in Sunset Addition, which will be available to the committee.

Cleaning up one or more blocks of Sunset Addition by removing trash and painting houses was discussed at the committee meeting and will be referred to The Missourians, a group of Negro leaders in Sunset.

The major problem in getting a clean up project started, Dr. Lively said, is communication with the community.

"We can't very well tell a man he has to paint his house," Dr. Lively added.

Charles Mitchell, reporting on the activities of the real estate committee, said that a map of the empty lots in Sunset is being studied for possible building sites.

The pressing need is a site for a subdivision, Mitchell said. Federal Housing Administration loans are available to those who qualify for a home improvement loan.

The FHA covers 90 per cent of the loans for improvements, Mitchell continued, and Recovery Inc. could cover the remaining 10 per cent of loans granted.

An FHA representative viewed Sunset and other areas of town with Mitchell and sent a kit for subdivision development. The major problem is where to develop a subdivision. If one block or more of Sunset were to be leveled for such a project where would the people live while it was being built, Mitchell asked.

Mitchell said the city under the provisions of the workable program will qualify for federal rent subsidies, which could help persons move into a subdivision.

Mayor Kendall Sikes questioned the rent subsidy statement and asked for more information on it.

The subdivision is most important, Mitchell stated. The 75 housing units for the elderly planned by the Sikeston Housing Authority already has 116 applications, Mitchell pointed out.

Charles Mays, Minneapolis, field co-ordinator for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People who has been working in Sikeston on a summer project three weeks aired his findings.

He stated that after taking a survey of 200 families in Sunset this summer three needs prevail. They are employment, housing and education.

Mays urged corporation in allowing Negroes to integrate. Building a subdivision and keeping the Negroes segregated is going backward, he said.

Mays is from Minneapolis. He asked efforts to convince people that property value will not go down when a Negro moves into a neighborhood.

Miller explained to Mays that the group is convinced of this but that prejudice exists and it may take years to overcome it. But, he added, "we are trying."

School Merger Decision Delayed

NEW MADRID -- Lyle Bird, Matthews, told a countywide meeting of school boards last night at the court house that the county school board of which he is president has agreed to give the boards a week to complete a survey on a proposed single county school district. There are eight school districts in the county.

Seventy five attended the meeting.

The consolidation plan calls for retention of present high schools and elementary schools and the establishment of a technical school at Catron.

School board members from the eight of the high school districts, presented the views of their boards and voters.

Four of the school district boards unanimously endorsed the county board single district proposal. One board voted 5 to 1 in favor. Two districts asked for additional time for a final decision.

Voting unanimously for the plan were the school boards of Portageville, Lilbourn, New Madrid and Matthews. The Morehouse board voted for it a five to one.

Risco and Parma asked more time to survey their districts.

The Gideon school board asked that their district be left out of the consolidation, reporting that a petition signed by 900 expressed this sentiment.

A Morehouse representative reported that they had a petition bearing 575 names asking that their district be annexed to the Sikeston R-6 district.

J. V. Conran, New Madrid county Democratic political boss, outlined the proposal.

Conran told representatives from the Gideon and Morehouse districts:

"I want you to know, each district has its own choice where it wants to send its children and chose its own school system and tax levy.

"If you choose to be left out of any reorganization plan, you will be left alone and will be under the jurisdiction of a new seven-man state commission," Conrad said.

The county board can submit a single county district plan to the state board of education in Jefferson City. If approved citizens of the county can be given the opportunity to vote on it.

If approved it would be submitted to the seven-man state committee, and if approved, a six-man county board would be chosen.

No school districts can be reorganized until after January of 1969.

All members of the county school board were present: Bird, Charles Pikey, Conran, vice-president; A. C. Riley, New Madrid; Comer Hicks, Risco; James Fletcher, Gideon; Tom Marshmeyer, Lilbourn, and Sam Bodine, New Madrid, secretary and non-voting member.

Something to Chew on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has announced a research study its subjects can get their teeth into.

In fact they'll have to in the study of chewing for which Case Institute of Technology in Cleveland, Ohio, received a $71,798 Division of Dental Health grant Friday.

Sweden to Move Drivers to Right

STOCKHOLM (AP) — To make sure its prisoners go right when they emerge into freedom, Sweden is including prisons in a massive publicity campaign preceding the nation's changeover to right-hand driving.

The final stage of the publicity campaign is being kicked off this weekend, two weeks before drivers take to the right side of the road. The changeover is costing $120 million, with $7 million of that allotted for publicity.

"We have to reach everybody, including handicapped people, foreigners, children, prisoners and so on," says Lars Skioeld, director of the Right-Hand Traffic Commission.

Newspapers and broadcast stations are being used in the advertising campaign. Eight million brochures will be distributed Monday to all Swedish households, hospitals and prisons. More brochures in 10 languages are available for foreigners living in Sweden.

Toys, soda and beer bottles and milk packages are being used to impress everyone that Sept. 3 is H-Day. The H stands for hoeger, right in Swedish.

By H-Day 360,000 directional signs will have been replaced or changed. Roads will bear 130,000 posters reminding the public to keep right.

"It has gone well so far," Skioeld said this week. "We hope, with the help of 8,000 policemen against 1,300 normally, and 150,000 volunteers, that Sept. 3 will come and go as smoothly as possible."

Man Admits Shooting and Burning Family to Death

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — Stearns County Sheriff Peter Lahr said today that David Hoskins, 30, has admitted shooting his wife and himself and setting the fire that destroyed the farm home in which the couple's four small children burned to death.

Mrs. Hoskins' body was also found in the smoldering rubble of their central Minnesota farm home early Friday.

Lahr called a news conference at which he said Hoskins had admitted the shootings and accompanying incidents.

Lahr said he had obtained a signed statement from Hoskins in which he admitted shooting his wife, Loretta, 29, with a .22-caliber rifle about midnight Thursday, then setting fire to the farm home and other buildings before tieing himself to an outdoor clothesline pipe.

Hoskins also admitted shooting himself with the same weapon, the sheriff said, and fabricated the story that intruders had shot him and then set the fires before tying him up.

Lahr said Hoskins told him that after he had bound himself he realized the children were in the burning home but became entangled and was unable to free himself.

When a group of teen-agers, attracted by the flames about midnight Friday, found Hoskins he was still tied to the clothesline pipe and bleeding from wounds in the abdomen and shoulder.

Lahr said he would ask County Atty. Paul Doerner to prepare a complaint against Hoskins charging him with the deaths of his wife and children.

The sheriff said a motive for the crime had been established but he did not elaborate.

Prospects Good For State Fair Opening

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri State Fair gates swung open today with prospects the crowd would be one of the largest for the opening day in the 65-year history of the fair.

Clear skies and cool temperatures and a night shower which settled the dust added to the fairgrounds' attraction.

The Highway Patrol said judging by the traffic on roads leading here there would be a big turnout. The patrol has assembled 75 troopers from various parts of the state to handle traffic during the fair's nine-day run.

This was Armed Forces Day and military units took part in opening ceremonies.

There were to be big car races this afternoon and jalopy races tonight. Also tonight will be the first of the horse shows.

Trooper Captures Wanted Man

A highway patrolman captured Joseph J. Kramer, 27, who gave a Chicago address. They accused him of leaving a house near Doniphan in a stolen car following a shooting in a family quarrel Friday.

The patrol received a call at 12:45 a.m. Friday from Trooper Kenneth Lancaster and Sheriff Louis Dawes in Ripley county that the escaped man had been shot in the stomach in the quarrel.

Kramer departed in a car, which was wrecked near Elsinore, fled on foot and was reported captured by a trooper.

Ralph Smith, one-armed deputy sheriff of Grandin, held briefly and took one of two guns out of the car before Kramer escaped.

Bloodhounds from Cape Girardeau joined the man hunt. Kramer was taken to the Ripley county jail at Doniphan.

Weekend Air to Remain Cool

KANSAS CITY (AP)— It will be a cool weekend in Missouri.

Temperatures dipped to record lows this morning in the northwest. It was 48 at both Maryville and St. Joseph. The Maryville reading was two degrees lower than the old mark for the date set in 1897. At St. Joseph it was three degrees under the old mark established in 1950.

Mills Claims Tougher Approach to Welfare Could Save $700 Million a Year in 5 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sponsors of a tougher approach to federally aided state welfare programs claim it would save the federal government more than $700 million a year within five years— even with greater initial outlays to help put recipients to work.

These claims will help fuel the arguments in the Senate Finance Committee and the Senate itself over the Social Security bill the House passed Thursday, embodying new requirements for welfare programs. Strong efforts are expected to make these less stringent.

When Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, the principal architect of the changes, defended them before the House, his argument dealt not so much with economy as with the need to break what he described as an unforeseen cycle of mounting welfare rolls.

"Is it in the public interest for welfare to become a way of life?" he asked, adding that the House Ways and Means Committee he heads has learned that in some aid to dependent children programs "we are now, in some instances, taking care of the third consecutive generation."

"I have reached the conclusion that this trend has got to be reversed," the Arkansas Democrat said.

He described new requirements spelled out for states getting federal help in caring for dependent children— job training and community work programs, exemption of earnings from benefit deduction, day care, and the like— as all aimed at urging members of assisted families who are capable of working to do so.

In addition the House bill contains sections to require family planning services and measures to establish paternity, designed to reduce the influx of children into the welfare programs, and a percentage freeze on the number of children each state may admit to its aid programs, except in cases of death or disablement of the breadwinner.

Mills said the Health, Education and Welfare Department estimates that, if the House bill becomes law, by 1972 there will be 400,000 fewer dependent children on the rolls than there would have been without the changes. His committee included in its report a table designed to show the over-all effect of the changes in the bill would reduce welfare costs $78 million this year and as much as $713.5 million in the year beginning July 1, 1971.

The big future savings depend heavily, however, on a change not directly connected with the dependent children's programs— a limitation on eligibility for medicaid which, unlike medicare, is a state-operated, federally assisted health program for persons of limited income. The saving on medicaid, the committee estimated, would be more than $1.4 billion in fiscal 1972.

Dr. Lively said that Community Action Agency has obtained information on the condition of houses in Sunset Addition, which will be available to the committee.

Cleaning up one or more blocks of Sunset Addition by removing trash and painting houses was discussed at the committee meeting and will be referred to The Missourians, a group of Negro leaders in Sunset.

The major problem in getting a clean up project started, Dr. Lively said, is communication with the community.

"We can't very well tell a man he has to paint his house," Dr. Lively added.

Charles Mitchell, reporting on the activities of the real estate committee, said that a map of the empty lots in Sunset is being studied for possible building sites.

The pressing need is a site for a subdivision, Mitchell said. Federal Housing Administration loans are available to those who qualify for a home improvement loan.

The FHA covers 90 per cent of the loans for improvements, Mitchell continued, and Recovery Inc. could cover the remaining 10 per cent of loans granted.

An FHA representative viewed Sunset and other areas of town with Mitchell and sent a kit for subdivision development. The major problem is where to develop a subdivision. If one block or more of Sunset were to be leveled for such a project where would the people live while it was being built, Mitchell asked.

Mitchell said the city under the provisions of the workable program will qualify for federal rent subsidies, which could help persons move into a subdivision.

Mayor Kendall Sikes questioned the rent subsidy statement and asked for more information on it.

The subdivision is most important, Mitchell stated. The 75 housing units for the elderly planned by the Sikeston Housing Authority already has 116 applications, Mitchell pointed out.

Charles Mays, Minneapolis, field co-ordinator for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People who has been working in Sikeston on a summer project three weeks aired his findings.

He stated that after taking a survey of 200 families in Sunset this summer three needs prevail. They are employment, housing and education.

Mays urged corporation in allowing Negroes to integrate. Building a subdivision and keeping the Negroes segregated is going backward, he said.

Mays is from Minneapolis. He asked efforts to convince people that property value will not go down when a Negro moves into a neighborhood.

Miller explained to Mays that the group is convinced of this but that prejudice exists and it may take years to overcome it. But, he added, "we are trying."

Speaker Stresses Three Needs of Negroes

Three ingredients were outlined to Sikeston Negroes as a prescription for victory by National Association for the Advancement of Colored People leader Gloster B. Current, New York City, in a meeting Friday night at the Community Action Agency.

No miracle drug is prescribed for the ills of this community, Current said. The recovery may resemble the recovery from tuberculosis. It will take patience and rest. It may require an operation, but a cure is in the offing.

What you must do to fill the prescription, Current continued, is first become a registered voter. As part of the NAACP summer project in Sikeston, workers have been reviewing the registration rolls and urging those persons who need to be registered to do so.

It is only when you have the power to vote that the politicians will listen, Current said.

As an example, Current continued, why doesn't Howardsville, a Negro community near the hometown of the governor, have a fire truck?

Furthermore, why doesn't the governor do something about it, he posed.

If you are registered voters and you ask the governor to do something about it, he'll listen to you. And if nothing is done he'll hear from you in November, he said.

The second main ingredient, Current said, is to motivate youth to stay in school as long as they can.

Businesses everywhere are looking for an "instant Negro" who is qualified, Current said. But the youths have to stay in school and obtain a degree, before the doors of opportunity will open, he said.

The third and most important ingredient for victory is to keep trying, he said. Don't feel defeated when progress is slow. Keep fighting for your freedom, believe in it and act accordingly.

Current warned the audience to beware of "quacks" who prescribe violence and riots as remedies to the social ills.

The persons who suffer most from riots and violence are the Negroes, he said. It is their community that is burned. The businesses that served them move out, because they no longer can obtain insurance.

Current said the progress has to come through the democratic system, and this is a slow process. It requires conferences, debate, examination, discussion and persistence for just a little progress.

President Johnson has done more for the Negroes than anyone ever expected, Current said. "He is one of, if not the most, progressive President we have had," he continued.

The federal government is doing much to make equality a reality through legislation, Current said.

Current's speech came at the midpoint of the NAACP's summer

THE SURFACE of the police department parking lot was graded and mixed with oil by city street department workers. The surface is a hot blade mix, similar to asphalt.

School Merger Decision Delayed

NEW MADRID -- Lyle Bird, Matthews, told a countywide meeting of school boards last night at the court house that the county school board of which he is president has agreed to give the boards a week to complete a survey on a proposed single county school district. There are eight school districts in the county.

Seventy five attended the meeting.

The consolidation plan calls for retention of present high schools and elementary schools and the establishment of a technical school at Catron.

School board members from the eight of the high school districts, presented the views of their boards and voters.

Four of the school district boards unanimously endorsed the county board single district proposal. One board voted 5 to 1 in favor. Two districts asked for additional time for a final decision.

Voting unanimously for the plan were the school boards of Portageville, Lilbourn, New Madrid and Matthews. The Morehouse board voted for it a five to one.

Risco and Parma asked more time to survey their districts.

The Gideon school board asked that their district be left out of the consolidation, reporting that a petition signed by 900 expressed this sentiment.

A Morehouse representative reported that they had a petition bearing 575 names asking that their district be annexed to the Sikeston R-6 district.

J. V. Conran, New Madrid county Democratic political boss, outlined the proposal.

Conran told representatives from the Gideon and Morehouse districts:

"I want you to know, each district has its own choice where it wants to send its children and chose its own school system and tax levy.

"If you choose to be left out of any reorganization plan, you will be left alone and will be under the jurisdiction of a new seven-man state commission," Conrad said.

The county board can submit a single county district plan to the state board of education in Jefferson City. If approved citizens of the county can be given the opportunity to vote on it.

If approved it would be submitted to the seven-man state committee, and if approved, a six-man county board would be chosen.

No school districts can be reorganized until after January of 1969.

Sweden to Move Drivers to Right

STOCKHOLM (AP) -- To make sure its prisoners go right when they emerge into freedom, Sweden is including prisons in a massive publicity campaign preceding the nation's changeover to right-hand driving.

The final stage of the publicity campaign is being kicked off this weekend, two weeks before drivers take to the right side of the road. The changeover is costing $120 million, with $7 million of that allotted for publicity.

"We have to reach everybody, including handicapped people, foreigners, children, prisoners and so on," says Lars Skioeld, director of the Right-Hand Traffic Commission.

Newspapers and broadcast stations are being used in the advertising campaign. Eight million brochures will be distributed Monday to all Swedish households, hospitals and prisons. More brochures in 10 languages are available for foreigners living in Sweden.

Toys, soda and beer bottles and milk packages are being used to impress everyone that Sept. 3 is H-Day. The H stands for hoeger, right in Swedish.

By H-Day 360,000 directional signs will have been replaced or changed. Roads will bear 130,000 posters reminding the public to keep right.

"It has gone well so far," Skioeld said this week. "We hope, with the help of 8,000 policemen against 1,300 normally, and 150,000 volunteers, that Sept. 3 will come and go as smoothly as possible."

EDWIN GARNER, Farmington, shares a view of a ceramic bowl on display at a crafts show from 1 p.m. - 9 p.m. today and Sunday at the Holiday Inn, with Mrs. James Terrell, representing the Sikeston Council on the Arts. He will lecture on stoneware pottery at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Man Admits Shooting and Burning Family to Death

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) -- Stearns County Sheriff Peter Lahr said today that David Hoskins, 30, has admitted shooting his wife and himself and setting the fire that destroyed the farm home in which the couple's four small children burned to death.

Mrs. Hoskins' body was also found in the smoldering rubble of their central Minnesota farm home early Friday.

Lahr called a news conference at which he said Hoskins had admitted the shootings and accompanying incidents.

Lahr said he had obtained a signed statement from Hoskins in which he admitted shooting his wife, Loretta, 29, with a .22-caliber rifle about midnight Thursday, then setting fire to the farm home and other buildings before tieing himself to an outdoor clothesline pipe.

Hoskins also admitted shooting himself with the same weapon, the sheriff said, and fabricated the story that intruders had shot him and then set the fires before tying him up.

Lahr said Hoskins told him that after he had bound himself he realized the children were in the burning home but became entangled and was unable to free himself.

When a group of teen-agers, attracted by the flames about midnight Friday, found Hoskins he was still tied to the clothesline pipe and bleeding from wounds in the abdomen and shoulder.

Lahr said he would ask County Atty. Paul Doerner to prepare a complaint against Hoskins charging him with the deaths of his wife and children.

The sheriff said a motive for the crime had been established but he did not elaborate.

Prospects Good For State Fair Opening

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) -- The Missouri State Fair gates swung open today with prospects the crowd would be one of the largest for the opening day in the 65-year history of the fair.

Clear skies and cool temperatures and a night shower which settled the dust added to the fairgrounds' attraction.

The Highway Patrol said judging by the traffic on roads leading here there would be a big turnout. The patrol has assembled 75 troopers from various parts of the state to handle traffic during the fair's nine-day run.

This was Armed Forces Day and military units took part in opening ceremonies.

There were to be big car races this afternoon and jalopy races tonight. Also tonight will be the first of the horse shows.

Trooper Captures Wanted Man

A highway patrolman captured Joseph J. Kramer, 27, who gave a Chicago address. They accused him of leaving a house near Doniphan in a stolen car following a shooting in a family quarrel Friday.

The patrol received a call at 12:45 a.m. Friday from Trooper Kenneth Lancaster and Sheriff Louis Dawes in Ripley county that the escaped man had been shot in the stomach in the quarrel.

Kramer departed in a car, which was wrecked near Elsinore, fled on foot and was reported captured by a trooper.

Ralph Smith, one-armed deputy sheriff of Grandin, held briefly and took one of two guns out of the car before Kramer escaped.

Bloodhounds from Cape Girardeau joined the man hunt. Kramer was taken to the Ripley county jail at Doniphan.

Weekend Air to Remain Cool

KANSAS CITY (AP)-- It will be a cool weekend in Missouri.

Temperatures dipped to record lows this morning in the northwest. It was 48 at both Maryville and St. Joseph. The Maryville reading was two degrees lower than the old mark for the date set in 1897. At St. Joseph it was three degrees under the old mark established in 1950.

Four Injured in Two Collisions

Four were injured in traffic accidents Friday at Marston and near Hayti.

In a four-car collision Friday at 8:45 p.m. on highway 61, three miles north of Hayti, John Smith, 57, Caruthersville and his wife, Gladys, 51, were injured when their 1951 Studebaker pickup truck slowed and was struck in the rear by a 1965 Volkswagen, driven by Judith Hart, 26, St. Louis, who struck a 1963 Buick, driven by Doyle Gross, 28, McCalla, Ala. The Volkswagen then hit the left side of a 1958 Ford, driven by Hiram Beck.

Smith received a sprained neck and body bruises, and Mrs. Smith, a head bump. Both were taken to the Pemiscot County Memorial hospital in Hayti.

Friday at 7:05 p.m. on highway 61, at the south edge of Marston, Philip Sinan, Jr., 35, Westchester, Ohio, was hurt critically in a two-car collision. He is in the Pemiscot County Memorial hospital with a skull fracture, concussion, chest injuries and face cuts.

Driving a 1966 Ford he attempted to pass a tractor trailer on a curve, causing a 1966 pickup truck driven by William McKernan, 57, NEW Haven, to go to the shoulder, where it was struck by the Sinan car when the driver lost control.

McKennan received head cuts and fractured ribs. He was taken to the Hayti hospital.

Refugee Flow Stirs Bitterness

ALLENBY BRIDGE, Israeli-hold Jordan (AP)-- Israel and Jordan traded charges of inefficiency in the repatriation of Jordanians to Israeli-held Jordan after only 355 refugees got home Friday.

The Red Cross had said about 1,000 would make the first crossings at what is left of Allenby Bridge and another bridge at Umm As-Shurat, 10 miles to the north.

Jordan has announced that 167,500 of the more than 200,000 Arabs who fled their homeland as Israeli troops seized the western bank of the Jordan River in the June 5-10 war want to be repatriated. But Israel says it doubts whether more than 35,000 can return before the Aug. 31 deadline Israel has set.

The crossings were halted today because Saturday is the Jewish Sabbath. If they are also halted next Saturday, Aug. 26, that would leave just 10 days more for repatriation.

Bitter feelings have already cropped up on both sides.

"The Jordanian organization let us down badly," said an Israeli interior ministry spokesman of Friday's repatriation. "It is apparently just not equipped to handle a project of this size."

But Jordanian officials complained that the names of those eligible to cross had been turned in by Israel only Thursday-- too late to organize the refugees efficiently.

Most of the first refugees were women, children and bent old men in long robes. This led the secretary of Jordan's refugee committee, Brig. Abdullah Rafee, to comment: "It seems the Israelis have selected only the very young and very old and have taken no chances on letting young men return yet."

Roland Troyon, a Red Cross official, said it would take six months to complete the repatriation at the present rate. But the Red Cross hopes to step up the flow of refugees to 4,000 a day next week.

Mills Claims Tougher Approach to Welfare Could Save $700 Million a Year in 5 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sponsors of a tougher approach to federally aided state welfare programs claim it would save the federal government more than $700 million a year within five years-- even with greater initial outlays to help put recipients to work.

These claims will help fuel the arguments in the Senate Finance Committee and the Senate itself over the Social Security bill the House passed Thursday, embodying new requirements for welfare programs. Strong efforts are expected to make these less stringent.

When Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, the principal architect of the changes, defended them before the House, his argument dealt not so much with economy as with the need to break what he described as an unforeseen cycle of mounting welfare rolls.

"Is it in the public interest for welfare to become a way of life?" he asked, adding that the House Ways and Means Committee he heads has learned that in some aid to dependent children programs "we are now, in some instances, taking care of the third consecutive generation."

"I have reached the conclusion that this trend has got to be reversed," the Arkansas Democrat said.

He described new requirements spelled out for states getting federal help in caring for dependent children-- job training and community work programs, exemption of earnings from benefit deduction, day care, and the like-- as all aimed at urging members of assisted families who are capable of working to do so.

In addition the House bill contains sections to require family planning services and measures to establish paternity, designed to reduce the influx of children into the welfare programs, and a percentage freeze on the number of children each state may admit to its aid programs, except in cases of death or disablement of the breadwinner.

Mills said the Health, Education and Welfare Department estimates that, if the House bill becomes law, by 1972 there will be 400,000 fewer dependent children on the rolls than there would have been without the changes. His committee included in its report a table designed to show the over-all effect of the changes in the bill would reduce welfare costs $78 million this year and as much as $713.5 million in the year beginning July 1, 1971.

The big future savings depend heavily, however, on a change not directly connected with the dependent children's programs-- a limitation on eligibility for medicaid which, unlike medicare, is a state-operated, federally assisted health program for persons of limited income. The saving on medicaid, the committee estimated, would be more than $1.4 billion in fiscal 1972.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE CHANNEL THE HARD WAY

Harry Hinken, personnel director for the Washington Redskins Marching Band, is scheduled to swim the English Channel on Thursday (Aug. 24). The International Lifeguard Championships will be held at Carpenteria, Calif., on Saturday (Aug. 26).

THE CHALLENGE of the English Channel to swimmers appears undying. The feat has been accomplished almost 60 times in the past decade, but about 1,000 swimmers have tried. An American is attempting to be the first to cross the channel paralyzed from the waist down.

Harry Hinken, an insurance salesman, former athlete, and one-time drum major of the band of the Washington Redskins football team, has been crippled by polio for the past 14 years. Despite his affliction, he will try to swim the Channel on Aug. 24. He will be swimming the Cap Gris-Nez, France, to Dover route. It's a distance of 20.6 miles and is generally considered the easy way. But without the use of his legs, Hinken's has to be the hard way.

RECORDS OF CHANNEL SWIMS have been kept for almost a century. The first known conqueror of the Channel was Capt. Matthew Webb of Great Britain, who in 1875 swam from Dover to Calais in 21 hrs., 45 min.

E. H. Temme of Britain was the first to swim the Channel in both directions (1927, 1934). William Barnie of Scotland was the first to swim it both ways in one year -- July and August 1951. Gertrude Elderle in 1926 was the first American woman to swim it.

Trudy, as she was called, was a creature and a star of America's Era of Champions and of Wonderful Nonsense. She was only 19 when she became the first women ever to swim the Channel. On her return to the States she was greeted with a Broadway ticker-tape parade. In two years after her swim, she estimated, she made $375,000.

No such bounty has come to America's Florence Chadwick, who has swum the Channel four times, the past three hard, West-East way. Leonore Modell of the United States, aged 14 years and 5 months, in 1964 became the youngest person ever to swim the Channel.

Fred Baldasare, American frogman from Cocoa Beach, Fla., on July 11, 1962, became the first man to swim the Channel underwater. Antonio Abertondo of Argentina in Sept. 1961 was the first man to swim round trip, taking 18 hrs., 50 min. from England to France and 24 hrs., 25 min. for the return trip. Ted Erikson, a Chicago physiotherapist, made the round trip in 30 hrs., 10 min. in 1965.

MEN HAVE TRIED to navigate La Manche (the sleeve), as the French call it, on a bedstead, a bathtub, in a canoe, and on a bale of hay. Back in 1963 one David Trapp did it in 7 hrs., 45 min. on an emphibious farm tractor.

When Harry Hinken makes his big swim he will be accompanied by either a doctor or a nurse. The rules of the English Swimming Association provide for this kind of protection.

Times of swims are expressed in hours and minutes and are considered official by the Channel Swimming Association only if swimmers are accompanied by official observers. Even in these disorderly times, we have to live by SOME rules.

The art of knowing when to keep silent should be ranked as the highest order of genius.

President Lyndon B. Johnson's problems are coming home to roost and the hen house is filled to overflowing.

It would be nice to agree with the politicians and convince ourselves that his request for a 10 per cent federal income surtax was unnecessary.

Nice except for the fact that the consequences would hurt the American people as much or more than they would the chief executive. After all, the President personally will bear only his financial share of the consequences regardless of what inaction will do to him politically.

The American people cannot now decide that President Johnson has too expensive tastes and they will ignore the consequences.

They put him in office and until his presidential term runs out they are going to have to accept all the consequences of his Great Society program, which they also endorsed at the polls. There's no way now to turn off the faucet.

When it comes time to vote again it will be another story but by then the deficit will be at record levels.

The greatest difficulty the country is now experiencing is the President's insitence on a guns and butter economy.

He has not established priorities.

When he went into office it may have been that the country could afford to pay both the costs of the Vietnam war and the expansive Great Society domestic program without resort to price and wage controls and without serious dislocation of the national economy.

If that were ever true it no longer is.

Inflation has returned as a serious threat to every citizen. The economy is getting overheated again and the deficit has risen so high, the Vietnam war costs have grown so astronical, the domestic requirements of the Johnson administration are soaring so high with each of his television appearances that even Johnson is worried about the consequences.

The 10 per cent surtax is vital under the circumstances. It is folly to talk of reducing federal costs to the point where it won't be necessary to apply the tax increase.

President Johnson isn't going to make any such reduction and the momentum of programs now in progress would limit its effectiveness if he did. Siphoning off the money from consumers to reduce their purchasing power still would be desirable as a means of reducing the inflation danger. The country should not risk another money crisis as the tight money squeeze produced earlier this year.

There is no real choice.

On the federal income tax surcharge proposal the best interests of the American people will be served if Congress, however reluctantly and wearily, once more goes all the way with LBJ.

The need for drivers to be extra alert as they travel to and from the State Fair was voiced today by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

"Every highway leading to the State fairgrounds will probably be heavily traveled during the days the Fiar is in progress," declared Colonel Hockaday. "It will be necessary for drivers to be alert for the mistakes of others and to show an extra amoung of courtesy to fellow motorists."

The Missouri State Fair begins Saturday, August 19, and ends Sunday, August 27.

"A trip to the State Fair is an annual custom for thousands of families," the Superintendent continued, "so every motorist should do his very best job of driving. I urge you to travel at prudent speeds, be patient and yield the right of way."

Colonel Hockaday also invited the public to visit the Highway Patrol's new exhibit trailer which will be located near the Highway Gardens area of the fairgrounds. The 50 by 10 foot air conditioned trailer contains display panels showing the work done by the Patrol to serve and protect the citizens of Missouri.

"We hope you will stop by our trailer and see how the Patrol goes about its job of enforcing the laws of the State. A patrolman will be on duty to answer any questions you might have concerning your Highway Patrol," Hockaday concluded.

USING THEIR HEADS

In these days when advocates of socialized power constantly clamor for support to build or expand public power facilities, it is heartening to know that there are people, who, when given a choice between tax-subsidized public power and investor-owned taxpaying power, prefer the services of a company operating in the free enterprise tradition.

Residents of Asotin County, Washington, a rural area in the extreme southeastern part of the state, had this choice recently, and they displayed their independence and respect for the private ownership system by rejecting a bid to replace an established investor-owned company with a Public Utility District.

In typical fashion, advocates of the PUD proposed their plan on the promises of lower rates for both water and electricity. But voters, recognizing the promises were half-truths, said "no" to the proposition in record numbers. They knew the consequences of public ownership would mean an increase in local taxes, not only for the cost of purchasing the power facilities, but to make up for the loss of tax revenue the investor-owned utility pays each year to all levels of governmane. They were not ready to turn out a tax-paying, publicly-regulated company which had proved many times over its ability to provide dependable, efficient service at reasonable rates.

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

Recent addresses to the graduating classes of two of our nation's largest colleges were noteworthy for their lack of comment on pride in United States citizenship and a free economy. One stressed the problems of technology, education, military aid, leadership, food production, peace and the hydrogen age.

The other was confined to problems of the university and the times, and the hope for a recognition of responsibility for maintaining and building the institution. Nowhere was there a forthright statement of the fact that the future of academic freedom and independent universities rests on perpetuation of our constitutional form of government and a free enterprise system, as contrasted with the totalitarian state.

It still remains for our schools and colleges to teach their students sound economics. No word was spoken to build pride in private property ownership and private enterprise, which are the foundation of our independent school system support. It's about time that our educators got over being afraid to use the terms mean to their future. Because if they are swallowed by government, academic freedom, as well as freedom of the individual, will be a thing of the past and representative government will be over. They will sink or swim together--they must support each other.

DRESS TIPS:

Belt wearers should smooth the waistline of the shirt towards the back, after the belt is tightened. This eliminates the wrinkles and bulging at the waistline...When shoes have had continuous wear, such as on a trip, give them a few days' rest and sprinkle some moth crystals inside to freshen them...If you wear a tie tack, do not pin it so that the tie is pulled too tautly. Allow enough play so that it won't pull the knot away from the collar.

ON STRETCHING TEACHERS

IN A FEW WEEKS a record number of young Americans will be streaming back to the public schools and we will be faced once again with a "teacher shortage" that grows worse each year.

You cure labor shortages in one of three ways:

You train and hire more workers.

You require your existing workers to work harder.

You evolve new techniques which will improve the output without increasing the work force or adding to the work load.

The entire success of the American industrial system has been based on methods of boosting the output faster than the work force. Only by so doing has it been possible to increase real wages, to pay the dividends necessary to attract capital for expansion, and to accumulate surpluses so that obsolescence may be fought.

WE DO NOT look upon public schools as we do upon industry, yet there are limitations that are common to both. An educational system that underpays or overworks its labor may have trouble with walkouts and will certainly have trouble with recruitment. Voters who won't pass bond issues or submit to higher school assessments are the equivalent of angry stockholders. Hence, it is not unreasonable to expect educators to seek among the successful devices of business some answers to their own problems.

Teaching is a form of salesmanship. Neither is adequately done by a mere recital of dull facts. Both require what we call impact. The best - sold customer is the one who becomes excited about the offered commodity or service, and identifies his welfare with its possession. The best - taught student is one who becomes excited about the subject and who sees in its mastery some relevance to his own welfare or happiness.

It is in this matter of impact that our schools are far behind proven techniques of salesmanship and advertising.

TAKE A HIGH SCHOOL course in Shakespeare. We have literally millions of students who are "taught" Shakespeare without ever having seen a Shakespearean play. Yet not fewer than five have been done magnificently for the screen. No student should ever finish the study of an act without watching an Olivier or a Gielgud do that act. Shakespeare can best be "sold" as high drama.

Modern language has too often been taught as an exercise of memory instead of a live method of communication. Some of our best schools have "language labs" in vocabulary and grammar. But few students are benefitted from langauge study unless they think it will be useful.

The French class of the future will use color motion picture travelogues containing printed French subtitles, keyed, of course, to the class level of proficiency. Students will simultaneously absorb, not merely the language, but a lot of geography and history.

THE DAY must come when the finest voices of the state will read English poetry to our kids. The nasal monotone of an ungifted classroom teacher can kill poetry, and often does. The day must come when no class in physics or chemistry will be without film clips showing the practical application of each rule or process, when biology will go far beyond dissected frogs and dramatically reveal life processes by animated diagrams and microscope photography.

"Teaching machines" and programed learning are in their infancy. There will be blind alleys, but any device that turns learning into a game has value. Machines are not available that can grade hundreds of multiple - choice examination papers in seconds. Much of the drudgery of teaching can now be avoided.

BEST OF ALL we can give education impact. Hollywood knows about impact. Madison Avenue knows about impact. Americans are the world's greatest salesmen. They are the matters of mass dramatics.

Instead of complaining that their students waste time staring at TV or going to the movies, let our educators rub the same lamp. We are now at the point where a million-dollar educational film would be a tremendous bargain if it could comprise one high school lecture series and be shown to tens of millions of students over a period of years.

Teachers can be stretched. Learning can be made more exciting. The imaginations of the bright can be stimulated and even the dull or the disadvantaged can be intrigued. We need no breakthroughs. All we need to use is the present state of the art of selling.

It is the education industry that needs to be dragged, kicking and screaming, into the last third of the twentieth century.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- France's Charles De Gaulle victim of a Soviet "disinformation" ring, which has penetrated his inner circle and planted misleading intelligence upon him. No doubt this has contributed to his obsessive anti-American attitude.

For years, the U.S. government has been aware of the Soviet operation inside De Gaulle's entourage. The late President Kennedy tried to warn him, but the imperious French leader refused to believe that any of his trusted advisors would misinform him.

The amazing story has now been fictionalized by the celebrated author, Leon Uris, who had access to the facts. Although his new novel, "Topaz," will be offered as fiction, it is close to the truth. It will include a letter, for example, which is similar to the one Kennedy wrote to De Gaulle.

"We have been informed," states Uris's version of the letter, "of the existence of a vast espionage network of French citizens employed as agents of the Soviet Union... It appears they have been successful in deeply infiltrating all branches of government, particularly your secret service.

"Employing a unique method, termed 'disinformation,' they have been able to direct false information and confusing intelligence into your highest councils. It is further revealed to us by our same source that a member or members are among your personal entourage.

"I urge you to send a team of experts to the United States to study all the information we have gathered and to interrogate our prime source of discovery."

De Gaulle spurned the offer.

He isn't the only world leader, incidentally, who has been taken in by Soviet 'disinformation' rings. Other western governments also have been infiltrated by Communist agents and informants, who are less interested in collecting information than in circulating misinformation.

They have helped to create some elaborate misrepresentations, using false intelligence and forged documents.

Their favorite technique is to drop a tidbit here, a rumor there, a falsehood elsewhere, like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. Then western intelligence agencies painstakingly fit the puzzle together until it forms an identifiable pattern.

What they don't always realize is that they are assembling precisely the distorted picture the Reds want them to see.

Note: My first experience with a "disinformation" ring occurred in Shanghai after World War II. I helped to expose the operations of a "disinformation" specialist named Nichols Lebedeff, who planted falsehood fragments through a motley group of informants.

The girl friend of an American army officer would pass on one fragment. An entrepreneur, who had been shut up in the Jewish Ghetto by the Japanese during World War II, would divulge another. Still other bits and pieces would come from seemingly unrelated sources.

I remember one incident when U.S. army G-2 pieced fragments together and concluded that a Soviet ship was smuggling arms to the Communist underground. The army passed on the "intelligence" to the nationalist authorities, who raided the ship and found nothing more incriminating than a few empty vodka bottles. The incident caused Chiang Kai-Shek's government to lose considerable "face."

FOLEY'S WHITE ELEPHANT

Outside the office of Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., sits a new, 257-pound robotype machine that cost the taxpayers $800. Unless congress clears away the red tape, it will still be sitting there five years from now.

Foley purchased the machine out of his equipment allowance two months ago. No sooner had he installed it in his office than the house provided each congressman with a more efficient, more expensive mach 10 autotypist.

The new machine displaced the obsolete robotype, which Foley tried to turn over to the general services administration for use elsewhere or for sale at a government auction.

He was dismayed to discover that the law required him to keep the machine, whether it can be used or not, for five years. He thought about shipping it to his home office in Spokane, Wash., where it might come in handy. But the law also prohibited shipment of the machine outside the halls of congress.

So this is precisely where it remains -- in a congressional hallway where Foley is tempted to mount a sign above it declaring: "Rust in peace!"

William Penn Patrick, the right-wing cosmetics tycoon, has withdrawn his financial support of the movement to recall Senator Church of Idaho.

Patrick put up the money to circulate recall petitions. He also paid for an anti - church rabloid; and was ready to fork over another $1,600 a month for 30 anti - Church billboards throughout Idaho.

But the recall campaign backfired. Idahoans didn't like the idea of a Californian trying to get rid of their senator. Patrick apparently decided he was helping more than hurting Church. So he is now refusing to continue financing the campaign.

Inside Labor

West Berlin's New Mayor Calls For Closer Cooperation With the East.

Suddenly, this past year, West Berlin, the wall and the heartache of the divided city fell from the headlines. Some of the "quiet" is due to Vietnam. Some is due to former mayor Willy Brandt's moving up to the national capital as Deputy Chancellor.

There is a new governing mayor now -- Heinrich Albertz. No crisis has propelled him into the world news -- yet. But the outpost, 100 miles inside Soviet territory, is still there, grim wall and all.

But what of the new mayor? What are his views? I asked him. Here is his headling-making reply:

By Heinrich Albertz
Governing Mayor of West Berlin

West Berlin -- This city is no longer headline material for the world press. We have arrived at an apparent normalcy in the abnormality of the whole situation. This may reassure some people in the world, but it shouldn't lull us to sleep. That does not mean that we Berliners would like to cause a new crisis or to disturb or even torpedo the efforts of our friends to achieve a detente in Europe.

It does mean that Berlin needs a new role and task in the changed setting of world policies. We know that we will be understood in Washington when we keep reminding people there that the geographical position of this city in the heart of Germany and of Europe, which for so long seemed a handicap, now offers many opportunities for the future of Berlin, a future assured by the safe shield of American guarantees and the allied presence in the city.

We Berliners must safeguard our freedom in the confrontation with dictatorship in a new manner. We are no longer what used to be called the "Island in the Red Sea," but we are more or less that place in Europe which provides a test case for peaceful coexistence of the two social and economic systems.

We must divest ourselves of the obsession of thinking in terms of a fortress. With responsible initiatives, none of which would jeopardize our free existence, we should open up new tasks for our economy and our 2.2 million people.

At the same time we will not turn our backs on the task which confronts all Germans, namely, to strive for the unification of the two parts of our people through peaceful means and with untiring tenacity. We will continue to strive to make the Wall that divides Berlin as a continuing shame to 20th-century humanity, permeable by peaceful means so that the deep kinship of families can be maintained and the basis of our community as a people can be preserved.

We seek understanding among our friends, and among those who today still consider themselves our opponents, for our desire to work together with them for a peaceful Europe.

We live under the same sky. We are threatened by the same pollution of the air and water which is a consequence of industrial development. We all share the wish for better means of transportation, for better communication, for improved trade and for rising standards of living. We should exchange the results of our scientific progress and our technological development so that the growing population in all Europe can profit from the achievements of each country. These are tasks which we can begin at once, but which we can only solve together.

In such cooperative efforts the question of different political views does not arise. They are incidental. They can be set aside for we well know that a joint attack on air pollution does not eliminate political differences. But the human contact, the common effort for the welfare of the individual and of nations diminishes tensions and makes it possible to talk freely about problems which up until now have been treated by each side as taboos.

We are prepared to offer better opportunities for travel, for freedom of movement, for the elimination of passes and identity cards, and for the unobstructed reunion of families. We are prepared for better cooperation in the fields of trade, of communication, of science, of technology and of cultural exchange. We are also prepared to seriously consider other proposals which would serve the end of working together.

If we succeed in tackling and solving these problems in the heart of Europe, then Berlin will have found its new place in a changing world. We count on our American friends. Without their help this new bridge in Europe will not have strong pillars.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE CHANNEL THE HARD WAY

Harry Hinken, personnel director for the Washington Redskins Marching Band, is scheduled to swim the English Channel on Thursday (Aug. 24). The International Lifeguard Championships will be held at Carpenteria, Calif., on Saturday (Aug. 26).

THE CHALLENGE of the English Channel to swimmers appears undying. The feat has been accomplished almost 60 times in the past decade, but about 1,000 swimmers have tried. An American is attempting to be the first to cross the channel paralyzed from the waist down.

Harry Hinken, an insurance salesman, former athlete, and one-time drum major of the band of the Washington Redskins football team, has been crippled by polio for the past 14 years. Despite his affliction, he will try to swim the Channel on Aug. 24. He will be swimming the Cap Gris-Nez, France, to Dover route. It's a distance of 20.6 miles and is generally considered the easy way. But without the use of his legs, Hinken's has to be the hard way.

RECORDS OF CHANNEL SWIMS have been kept for almost a century. The first known conqueror of the Channel was Capt. Matthew Webb of Great Britain, who in 1875 swam from Dover to Calais in 21 hrs., 45 min.

E. H. Temme of Britain was the first to swim the Channel in both directions (1927, 1934). William Barnie of Scotland was the first to swim it both ways in one year -- July and August 1951. Gertrude Elderle in 1926 was the first American woman to swim it.

Trudy, as she was called, was a creature and a star of America's Era of Champions and of Wonderful Nonsense. She was only 19 when she became the first women ever to swim the Channel. On her return to the States she was greeted with a Broadway ticker-tape parade. In two years after her swim, she estimated, she made $375,000.

No such bounty has come to America's Florence Chadwick, who has swum the Channel four times, the past three hard, West-East way. Leonore Modell of the United States, aged 14 years and 5 months, in 1964 became the youngest person ever to swim the Channel.

Fred Baldasare, American frogman from Cocoa Beach, Fla., on July 11, 1962, became the first man to swim the Channel underwater. Antonio Abertondo of Argentina in Sept. 1961 was the first man to swim round trip, taking 18 hrs., 50 min. from England to France and 24 hrs., 25 min. for the return trip. Ted Erikson, a Chicago physiotherapist, made the round trip in 30 hrs., 10 min. in 1965.

MEN HAVE TRIED to navigate La Manche (the sleeve), as the French call it, on a bedstead, a bathtub, in a canoe, and on a bale of hay. Back in 1963 one David Trapp did it in 7 hrs., 45 min. on an emphibious farm tractor.

When Harry Hinken makes his big swim he will be accompanied by either a doctor or a nurse. The rules of the English Swimming Association provide for this kind of protection.

Times of swims are expressed in hours and minutes and are considered official by the Channel Swimming Association only if swimmers are accompanied by official observers. Even in these disorderly times, we have to live by SOME rules.

The art of knowing when to keep silent should be ranked as the highest order of genius.

President Lyndon B. Johnson's problems are coming home to roost and the hen house is filled to overflowing.

It would be nice to agree with the politicians and convince ourselves that his request for a 10 per cent federal income surtax was unnecessary.

Nice except for the fact that the consequences would hurt the American people as much or more than they would the chief executive. After all, the President personally will bear only his financial share of the consequences regardless of what inaction will do to him politically.

The American people cannot now decide that President Johnson has too expensive tastes and they will ignore the consequences.

They put him in office and until his presidential term runs out they are going to have to accept all the consequences of his Great Society program, which they also endorsed at the polls. There's no way now to turn off the faucet.

When it comes time to vote again it will be another story but by then the deficit will be at record levels.

The greatest difficulty the country is now experiencing is the President's insitence on a guns and butter economy.

He has not established priorities.

When he went into office it may have been that the country could afford to pay both the costs of the Vietnam war and the expansive Great Society domestic program without resort to price and wage controls and without serious dislocation of the national economy.

If that were ever true it no longer is.

Inflation has returned as a serious threat to every citizen. The economy is getting overheated again and the deficit has risen so high, the Vietnam war costs have grown so astronical, the domestic requirements of the Johnson administration are soaring so high with each of his television appearances that even Johnson is worried about the consequences.

The 10 per cent surtax is vital under the circumstances. It is folly to talk of reducing federal costs to the point where it won't be necessary to apply the tax increase.

President Johnson isn't going to make any such reduction and the momentum of programs now in progress would limit its effectiveness if he did. Siphoning off the money from consumers to reduce their purchasing power still would be desirable as a means of reducing the inflation danger. The country should not risk another money crisis as the tight money squeeze produced earlier this year.

There is no real choice.

On the federal income tax surcharge proposal the best interests of the American people will be served if Congress, however reluctantly and wearily, once more goes all the way with LBJ.

The need for drivers to be extra alert as they travel to and from the State Fair was voiced today by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

"Every highway leading to the State fairgrounds will probably be heavily traveled during the days the Fiar is in progress," declared Colonel Hockaday. "It will be necessary for drivers to be alert for the mistakes of others and to show an extra amoung of courtesy to fellow motorists."

The Missouri State Fair begins Saturday, August 19, and ends Sunday, August 27.

"A trip to the State Fair is an annual custom for thousands of families," the Superintendent continued, "so every motorist should do his very best job of driving. I urge you to travel at prudent speeds, be patient and yield the right of way."

Colonel Hockaday also invited the public to visit the Highway Patrol's new exhibit trailer which will be located near the Highway Gardens area of the fairgrounds. The 50 by 10 foot air conditioned trailer contains display panels showing the work done by the Patrol to serve and protect the citizens of Missouri.

"We hope you will stop by our trailer and see how the Patrol goes about its job of enforcing the laws of the State. A patrolman will be on duty to answer any questions you might have concerning your Highway Patrol," Hockaday concluded.

USING THEIR HEADS

In these days when advocates of socialized power constantly clamor for support to build or expand public power facilities, it is heartening to know that there are people, who, when given a choice between tax-subsidized public power and investor-owned taxpaying power, prefer the services of a company operating in the free enterprise tradition.

Residents of Asotin County, Washington, a rural area in the extreme southeastern part of the state, had this choice recently, and they displayed their independence and respect for the private ownership system by rejecting a bid to replace an established investor-owned company with a Public Utility District.

In typical fashion, advocates of the PUD proposed their plan on the promises of lower rates for both water and electricity. But voters, recognizing the promises were half-truths, said "no" to the proposition in record numbers. They knew the consequences of public ownership would mean an increase in local taxes, not only for the cost of purchasing the power facilities, but to make up for the loss of tax revenue the investor-owned utility pays each year to all levels of governmane. They were not ready to turn out a tax-paying, publicly-regulated company which had proved many times over its ability to provide dependable, efficient service at reasonable rates.

The day must come when no class in physics or chemistry will be without film clips showing the practical application of each rule or process, when biology will go far beyond dissected frogs and dramatically reveal life processes by animated diagrams and microscope photography.

"Teaching machines" and programed learning are in their infancy. There will be blind alleys, but any device that turns learning into a game has value. Machines are not available that can grade hundreds of multiple - choice examination papers in seconds. Much of the drudgery of teaching can now be avoided.

BEST OF ALL we can give education impact. Hollywood knows about impact. Madison Avenue knows about impact. Americans are the world's greatest salesmen. They are the matters of mass dramatics.

Instead of complaining that their students waste time staring at TV or going to the movies, let our educators rub the same lamp. We are now at the point where a million-dollar educational film would be a tremendous bargain if it could comprise one high school lecture series and be shown to tens of millions of students over a period of years.

Teachers can be stretched. Learning can be made more exciting. The imaginations of the bright can be stimulated and even the dull or the disadvantaged can be intrigued. We need no breakthroughs. All we need to use is the present state of the art of selling.

It is the education industry that needs to be dragged, kicking and screaming, into the last third of the twentieth century.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- France's Charles De Gaulle has been a victim of a Soviet "disinformation" ring, which has penetrated his inner circle and planted misleading intelligence upon him. No doubt this has contributed to his obsessive anti-American attitude.

For years, the U.S. government has been aware of the Soviet operation inside De Gaulle's entourage. The late President Kennedy tried to warn him, but the imperious French leader refused to believe that any of his trusted advisors would misinform him.

The amazing story has now been fictionalized by the celebrated author, Leon Uris, who had access to the facts. Although his new novel, "Topaz," will be offered as fiction, it is close to the truth. It will include a letter, for example, which is similar to the one Kennedy wrote to De Gaulle.

"We have been informed," states Uris's version of the letter, "of the existence of a vast espionage network of French citizens employed as agents of the Soviet Union... It appears they have been successful in deeply infiltrating all branches of government, particularly your secret service.

"Employing a unique method, termed 'disinformation,' they have been able to direct false information and confusing intelligence into your highest councils. It is further revealed to us by our same source that a member or members are among your personal entourage.

"I urge you to send a team of experts to the United States to study all the information we have gathered and to interrogate our prime source of discovery."

De Gaulle spurned the offer.

He isn't the only world leader, incidentally, who has been taken in by Soviet 'disinformation' rings. Other western governments also have been infiltrated by Communist agents and informants, who are less interested in collecting information than in circulating misinformation.

They have helped to create some elaborate misrepresentations, using false intelligence and forged documents.

Their favorite technique is to drop a tidbit here, a rumor there, a falsehood elsewhere, like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. Then western intelligence agencies painstakingly fit the puzzle together until it forms an identifiable pattern.

What they don't always realize is that they are assembling precisely the distorted picture the Reds want them to see.

Note: My first experience with a "disinformation" ring occurred in Shanghai after World War II. I helped to expose the operations of a "disinformation" specialist named Nichols Lebedeff, who planted falsehood fragments through a motley group of informants.

The girl friend of an American army officer would pass on one fragment. An entrepreneur, who had been shut up in the Jewish Ghetto by the Japanese during World War II, would divulge another. Still other bits and pieces would come from seemingly unrelated sources.

I remember one incident when U.S. army G-2 pieced fragments together and concluded that a Soviet ship was smuggling arms to the Communist underground. The army passed on the "intelligence" to the nationalist authorities, who raided the ship and found nothing more incriminating than a few empty vodka bottles. The incident caused Chiang Kai-Shek's government to lose considerable "face."

FOLEY'S WHITE ELEPHANT

Outside the office of Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., sits a new, 257-pound robotype machine that cost the taxpayers $800. Unless congress clears away the red tape, it will still be sitting there five years from now.

Foley purchased the machine out of his equipment allowance two months ago. No sooner had he installed it in his office than the house provided each congressman with a more efficient, more expensive mach 10 autotypist.

The new machine displaced the obsolete robotype, which Foley tried to turn over to the general services administration for use elsewhere or for sale at a government auction.

He was dismayed to discover that the law required him to keep the machine, whether it can be used or not, for five years. He thought about shipping it to his home office in Spokane, Wash., where it might come in handy. But the law also prohibited shipment of the machine outside the halls of congress.

So this is precisely where it remains -- in a congressional hallway where Foley is tempted to mount a sign above it declaring: "Rust in peace!"

William Penn Patrick, the right-wing cosmetics tycoon, has withdrawn his financial support of the movement to recall Senator Church of Idaho.

Patrick put up the money to circulate recall petitions. He also paid for an anti - church rabloid; and was ready to fork over another $1,600 a month for 30 anti - Church billboards throughout Idaho.

But the recall campaign backfired. Idahoans didn't like the idea of a Californian trying to get rid of their senator. Patrick apparently decided he was helping more than hurting Church. So he is now refusing to continue financing the campaign.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

West Berlin's New Mayor Calls For Closer Cooperation With the East.

Suddenly, this past year, West Berlin, the wall and the heartache of the divided city fell from the headlines. Some of the "quiet" is due to Vietnam. Some is due to former mayor Willy Brandt's moving up to the national capital as Deputy Chancellor.

There is a new governing mayor now -- Heinrich Albertz. No crisis has propelled him into the world news -- yet. But the outpost, 100 miles inside Soviet territory, is still there, grim wall and all.

But what of the new mayor? What are his views? I asked him. Here is his headling-making reply:

By Heinrich Albertz
Governing Mayor of West Berlin

West Berlin -- This city is no longer headline material for the world press. We have arrived at an apparent normalcy in the abnormality of the whole situation. This may reassure some people in the world, but it shouldn't lull us to sleep. That does not mean that we Berliners would like to cause a new crisis or to disturb or even torpedo the efforts of our friends to achieve a detente in Europe.

It does mean that Berlin needs a new role and task in the changed setting of world policies. We know that we will be understood in Washington when we keep reminding people there that the geographical position of this city in the heart of Germany and of Europe, which for so long seemed a handicap, now offers many opportunities for the future of Berlin, a future assured by the safe shield of American guarantees and the allied presence in the city.

We Berliners must safeguard our freedom in the confrontation with dictatorship in a new manner. We are no longer what used to be called the "Island in the Red Sea," but we are more or less that place in Europe which provides a test case for peaceful coexistence of the two social and economic systems.

We must divest ourselves of the obsession of thinking in terms of a fortress. With responsible initiatives, none of which would jeopardize our free existence, we should open up new tasks for our economy and our 2.2 million people.

At the same time we will not turn our backs on the task which confronts all Germans, namely, to strive for the unification of the two parts of our people through peaceful means and with untiring tenacity. We will continue to strive to make the Wall that divides Berlin as a continuing shame to 20th-century humanity, permeable by peaceful means so that the deep kinship of families can be maintained and the basis of our community as a people can be preserved.

We seek understanding among our friends, and among those who today still consider themselves our opponents, for our desire to work together with them for a peaceful Europe.

We live under the same sky. We are threatened by the same pollution of the air and water which is a consequence of industrial development. We all share the wish for better means of transportation, for better communication, for improved trade and for rising standards of living. We should exchange the results of our scientific progress and our technological development so that the growing population in all Europe can profit from the achievements of each country. These are tasks which we can begin at once, but which we can only solve together.

In such cooperative efforts the question of different political views does not arise. They are incidental. They can be set aside for we well know that a joint attack on air pollution does not eliminate political differences. But the human contact, the common effort for the welfare of the individual and of nations diminishes tensions and makes it possible to talk freely about problems which up until now have been treated by each side as taboos.

We are prepared to offer better opportunities for travel, for freedom of movement, for the elimination of passes and identity cards, and for the unobstructed reunion of families. We are prepared for better cooperation in the fields of trade, of communication, of science, of technology and of cultural exchange. We are also prepared to seriously consider other proposals which would serve the end of working together.

If we succeed in tackling and solving these problems in the heart of Europe, then Berlin will have found its new place in a changing world. We count on our American friends. Without their help this new bridge in Europe will not have strong pillars.

Buried in the beautiful Black Hills of South Dakota are some mighty weapons of the free world, the Minuteman missile system. While receiving training as a launch officer in California prior to being stationed at the missile base, I often wondered if the sudden addition of this nuclear complex had had any noticeable effects on South Dakotans. I soon found out.

Upon arriving in Rapid City, S.D., I entered a bank to open a checking account. A young bank employe, charged with setting up the account, asked my occupation.

"Minuteman officer," I replied.

The young man looked at me incredulously. Then he asked, "All the way from Concord?"

Exercise Helps Maintain Figure

By Mrs. Mattie E. Aslin
Extension Home Economist

KENNETT -- It's a lot easier to keep a slim, trim figure than it is to go on a strict reducing diet and lose weight. A slim figure helps you feel and look younger.

Exercise -- or physical activity -- is an ally in holding weight and in losing it. If you exercise less you must eat less to hold your weight, say nutrition experts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Long hours of strenous exercise are not necessary to keep weight under control. Regular, less - strenous exercise can be effective for those who should take it easier, and want to maintain weight or lose it while eating enough food to be satisified.

Take, for example, an overweight woman whose daily food provides her with just enough calories to maintain her weight. If she decreases by one hour daily the time spent in activities she does while sitting and spends this time in moderately active work around the house, she increases the calories used by the body by about 90 a day.

She will lose about nine pounds in a year if she continues to eat as she has been eating and makes no other changes in her activities.

If she takes a second hour every day and shifts from activities done while sitting to active recreation, she will use an additional 170 calories a day.

Use seasonal foods with shelf foods for a nutritional main dish.

BAKED LIMA BEANS AND TOMATOES

Lima beans are plentiful and here's a new way to serve this thrifty favorite. It's protein rich and you can make it a main dish. To add a liberal amount of animal protein to the meal, why not serve baked custard or a pie or pudding made with egg as your desserts. These desserts also are thrifty, as eggs are so favorably priced this season.

Lima beans, cooked (about 1-½ cups dry) 4 cups
Tomatoes, canned, 1 pound - 2 cups
Onion, chopped - ¼ cup
Brown sugar - ¼ cup
Chili powder - ½ teaspoon
Vinegar - 1 tablespoon
Salt - 1-½ teaspoons
Bacon, finely chopped - 3 slices

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Combine ingredients, except bacon, in a 1-½ quart casserole. Sprinkle bacon on top. Bake 1-½ hours.

Menu Suggestion -- Serve with asparagus, head lettuce salad, and custard pie.

I worked as a civilian at Camp McCoy, Wis., during World War II. A regiment from Alabama was assigned to McCoy, and, as was the practice, sent an advance unit to assure that housing and mess facilities were in readiness. The day the advance unit arrived at camp, the temperature was a penetrating 20 degrees below zero.

About ten o'clock that morning, the shivering sergeant in charge of the advance unit asked if he could step into my office to warm up. After looking out the window at the bleak scene for some moments, he turned to me and asked, "Do people live around heah when there ain't no wahr?" Matt N. Marx

My son Bob, stationed in Norfolk, Va., lived next door to one of his buddies. The wives of both were to have babies about the same time, so the boys had agreed that if one was on duty when the time came, the other would take the expectant mother to the hospital.

Bob's baby came first. He was at home at the time, took his wife to the hospital and behaved in the usual manner of a young husband with his first child. A week later, when his friend's wife showed signs of imminent delivery, Bob was on hand to take her to the hospital. He thought he should stay awhile, so he sat in the waiting room and took a nap. After a bit, he awoke to find two nurses standing before him.

"Weren't you in here just last week?" one of them asked accusingly.

"Yes," said Bob uncernedly. "But that was my wife!"

Groucho Marx' Daughter toWed French Clerk

ST. DENIS, France (AP) — A month before his planned marriage to Groucho Marx' daughter, Melinda, 21-year-old Jacques Guilloux has quit his job as a $40-a-week town clerk and says: "We're going to travel. Maybe for five years."

"First to America to see her father," he added. "Then to Asia. I want to see how people live there. After that? We'll see."

Guilloux, who has long sideburns and speaks a little English, said Friday he met Miss Marx, also 21, on a kibbutz in Israel last month and "it was love at first sight."

He said his fiancee now speaks "40 words of French, which is better than when I met her. Then she spoke only 10 words of French."

Anyway, he said, "we get along well. We understand each other."

Although an interview had been arranged in advance, Miss Marx declined to talk to a reporter.

"You know women," Guilloux said.

"Maybe if you come back tomorrow she'll talk to you," he added. "I'm sure she will."

Guilloux has an apartment in a public housing project in the industrial suburb of St. Denis, north of Paris.

A TIME EXPOSURE TO GOD

There is an advantage in Christian Conversion being well-defined. But no matter how striking our first encounter with God may have been we all begin the Christian life as baby Christians. It takes time to become mature. It requires more than instant exposure to take the Lord's picture on the human heart. But the time-exposure will do it. You need to make worship a regular part of your life. There is one means by which you can become a Calmer, more Christ-like person. Why not begin Sunday?

Buried in the beautiful Black Hills of South Dakota are some mighty weapons of the free world, the Minuteman missile system. While receiving training as a launch officer in California prior to being stationed at the missile base, I often wondered if the sudden addition of this nuclear complex had had any noticeable effects on South Dakotans. I soon found out.

Upon arriving in Rapid City, S.D., I entered a bank to open a checking account. A young bank employe, charged with setting up the account, asked my occupation.

"Minuteman officer," I replied.

The young man looked at me incredulously. Then he asked, "All the way from Concord?"

Exercise Helps Maintain Figure

By Mrs. Mattie E. Aslin
Extension Home Economist

KENNETT -- It's a lot easier to keep a slim, trim figure than it is to go on a strict reducing diet and lose weight. A slim figure helps you feel and look younger.

Exercise -- or physical activity -- is an ally in holding weight and in losing it. If you exercise less you must eat less to hold your weight, say nutrition experts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Long hours of strenous exercise are not necessary to keep weight under control. Regular, less - strenous exercise can be effective for those who should take it easier, and want to maintain weight or lose it while eating enough food to be satisified.

Take, for example, an overweight woman whose daily food provides her with just enough calories to maintain her weight. If she decreases by one hour daily the time spent in activities she does while sitting and spends this time in moderately active work around the house, she increases the calories used by the body by about 90 a day.

She will lose about nine pounds in a year if she continues to eat as she has been eating and makes no other changes in her activities.

If she takes a second hour every day and shifts from activities done while sitting to active recreation, she will use an additional 170 calories a day.

Use seasonal foods with shelf foods for a nutritional main dish.

BAKED LIMA BEANS AND TOMATOES

Lima beans are plentiful and here's a new way to serve this thrifty favorite. It's protein rich and you can make it a main dish. To add a liberal amount of animal protein to the meal, why not serve baked custard or a pie or pudding made with egg as your desserts. These desserts also are thrifty, as eggs are so favorably priced this season.

Lima beans, cooked (about 1-½ cups dry) 4 cups
Tomatoes, canned, 1 pound - 2 cups
Onion, chopped - ¼ cup
Brown sugar - ¼ cup
Chili powder - ½ teaspoon
Vinegar - 1 tablespoon
Salt - 1-½ teaspoons
Bacon, finely chopped - 3 slices

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Combine ingredients, except bacon, in a 1-½ quart casserole. Sprinkle bacon on top. Bake 1-½ hours.

Menu Suggestion -- Serve with asparagus, head lettuce salad, and custard pie.

I worked as a civilian at Camp McCoy, Wis., during World War II. A regiment from Alabama was assigned to McCoy, and, as was the practice, sent an advance unit to assure that housing and mess facilities were in readiness. The day the advance unit arrived at camp, the temperature was a penetrating 20 degrees below zero.

About ten o'clock that morning, the shivering sergeant in charge of the advance unit asked if he could step into my office to warm up. After looking out the window at the bleak scene for some moments, he turned to me and asked, "Do people live around heah when there ain't no wahr?" Matt N. Marx

My son Bob, stationed in Norfolk, Va., lived next door to one of his buddies. The wives of both were to have babies about the same time, so the boys had agreed that if one was on duty when the time came, the other would take the expectant mother to the hospital.

Bob's baby came first. He was at home at the time, took his wife to the hospital and behaved in the usual manner of a young husband with his first child. A week later, when his friend's wife showed signs of imminent delivery, Bob was on hand to take her to the hospital. He thought he should stay awhile, so he sat in the waiting room and took a nap. After a bit, he awoke to find two nurses standing before him.

"Weren't you in here just last week?" one of them asked accusingly.

"Yes," said Bob unconcernedly. "But that was my wife!"

Groucho Marx' Daughter toWed French Clerk

ST. DENIS, France (AP) -- A month before his planned marriage to Groucho Marx' daughter, Melinda, 21-year-old Jacques Guilloux has quit his job as a $40-a-week town clerk and says: "We're going to travel. Maybe for five years."

"First to America to see her father," he added. "Then to Asia. I want to see how people live there. After that? We'll see."

Guilloux, who has long sideburns and speaks a little English, said Friday he met Miss Marx, also 21, on a kibbutz in Israel last month and "it was love at first sight."

He said his fiancee now speaks "40 words of French, which is better than when I met her. Then she spoke only 10 words of French."

Anyway, he said, "we get along well. We understand each other."

Although an interview had been arranged in advance, Miss Marx declined to talk to a reporter.

"You know women," Guilloux said.

"Maybe if you come back tomorrow she'll talk to you," he added. "I'm sure she will."

Guilloux has an apartment in a public housing project in the industrial suburb of St. Denis, north of Paris.

A TIME EXPOSURE TO GOD

There is an advantage in Christian Conversion being well-defined. But no matter how striking our first encounter with God may have been we all begin the Christian life as baby Christians. It takes time to become mature. It requires more than instant exposure to take the Lord's picture on the human heart. But the time-exposure will do it. You need to make worship a regular part of your life. There is one means by which you can become a Calmer, more Christ-like person. Why not begin Sunday?

Astros, Seventh Straight Victim

By the Associated Press

The vise-tight pennant race so long a trademark of the National League has been only a hazy memory this August, and the St. Louis Cardinals seem determined to keep it that way.

The red-hot Cardinals spun off their seventh straight victory Friday night, whipping Houston 5-3 on Steve Carlton's six-hitter. The victory ballooned the Cards' league lead to 11 1/2 games.

St. Louis has shattered the race with a torried 13-4 pace this month. They led by just 3 1/2 games as the month began, but won five straight games and have been just about unstoppable ever since.

Carlton struck out 11 Friday night and didn't allow a hit after the sixth inning. Julian Javier and Mike Shannon handled the hitting, each smashing a home run and driving in a pair of runs. Shannon's 10th and Javier's 12th of the season.

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago tripped Philadelphia 3-1, Pittsburgh pounded New York 7-2, San Francisco stopped Cincinnati 3-1 and Los Angeles downed Atlanta 5-1.

Shannon's fourth-inning homer was the first hit off Houston's Mike Cuellar. After Tim McCarver reached on an error, Javier unloaded and the Cards had a 3-0 lead.

Bob Aspromonte's two-run double rocked Carlton in the sixth, but the young left-hander settled down and did not allow another hit. The victory ran his record to 11-6.

Dick Hughes, 11-4 will try to pitch the Cards to their eight straight at Houston tonight against Astros rookie Don Wilson, 8-8.

Rookie left-hander Jim Ellis won his first major league game and halted a four-game Chicago losing streak as the Cubs dropped the Phillies.

Ellis, recalled from Tacoma August 10, worked into the seventh inning before giving way to Chuck Hartenstein. Glenn Beckert drove in two Chicago runs as the Cubs beat ex-teammate Larry Jackson.

Bob Veale hurled a seven-hiter and Willie Stargell reached Forbes Field's distant right field roof for the second time this season as Pittsburgh pounded the Mets.

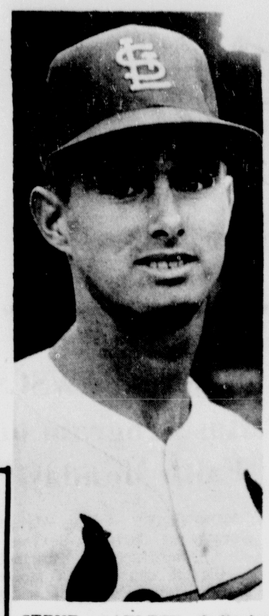
Stargell's fourth inning homer - his 17th of the year - was only the 12th to go over the roof in Forbes Field's 59-year history. Stargell is the first player ever to put two in that sector in one season.

Ray Sadecki hurled a six-hitter and Jesus Alou lined four hits and drove in two runs as the Giants dropped the Reds.

Willie Mays' fifth inning single snapped a 1-1 tie and Alou's fourth hit of the game brought in another Giant run in the eighth as San Francisco beat Milt Pappas, 12-8. Sadecki is 5-4.

Lou Johnson slammed two home runs and Don Drysdale won his first game since July 15 as the Dodgers sunk the Braves.

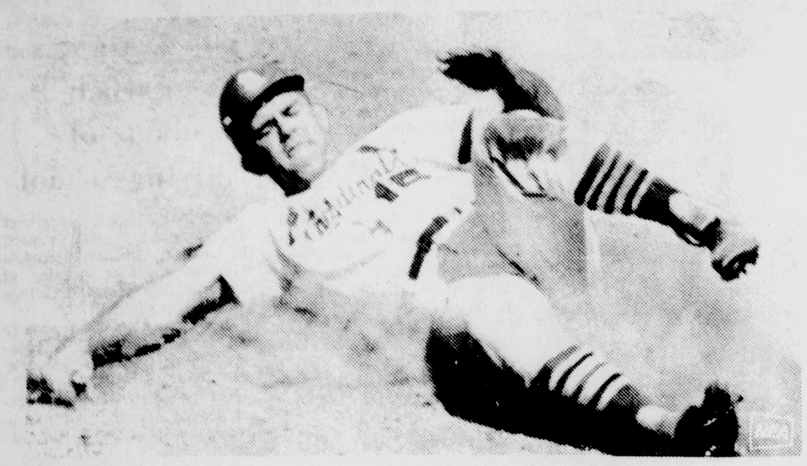
Johnson connected in the first and fourth innings against loser Denny Lemaster and then walked and scored in the Dodgers' three-run wrapup rally in the sixth.



STEVE CARLTON chalked up his 11th season victory last night by posting a six-hit, 5-3, victory over Houston in the Astrodome. He had 11 strikeouts.

JULIAN JAVIER blasted his 12th homer of the season last night, enabling the Cardinals to streak to its seventh straight victory. The Cards won, 5-3.

MIKE SHANNON cracked his 10th homer of the season as the Cards beat Houston 5-3 last night to move out into an 11 1/2 game lead. It was the Birds seventh straight win.



TIM McCARVER of the St. Louis Cardinals is one of the National League's leading hitters. Since he's on base so often, Tim scores his share of runs, too. Like this one.

Sox Slugger Felled, Out Three Weeks

By the Associated Press

The only hit the California Angels could make for 6 1-3 innings Friday night was one by their pitcher and it's still got the Boston Red Sox plenty worried.

In the fourth inning of Boston's 3-2 victory, Angel starter Jack Hamilton felled Boston slugger Tony Conigliaro by hitting him with a pitch on the left temple and knocking him unconscious.

Conigliaro was rushed to the hospital where the diagnosis was a cracked cheek bone, severe nasal hemorrhage and three weeks out of the line-up. The first two will bother Tony, but the Red Sox, still fighting for the American League pennant, are sure to feel the effects of the latter.

Gary Bell stopped California without a hit until with one out in the seventh inning, Jimmie Hall hit his 14th homer over the left-field screen. Hall followed with another homer in the ninth.

Bell led the Boston hitting attack, too, connecting for a double and a run-scoring single. Rico Petrocelli tripled in another run and scored on a bad relay throw to the plate by Jim Fregosi.

In other American League games, New York and Minnesota split a twi-night doubleheader 1-0 and 3-4, Washington edged Kansas City 7-6, Detroit stopped Cleveland 4-0 in a rain-shortened affair and Chicago split with Baltimore, winning 3-1 before losing 8-2.

Joe Pepitone drove in a run with a single in the first inning of the Twins-Yankees opener and Steve Barber made it stand up the rest of the game, shutting out the Twins on six hits.

The Yanks were winning the nightcap 3-2 behind Fred Talbot's five-hit pitching, when Rich Reese turned things around with a two-run pinch homer in the ninth. Harmon Killebrew drove in two runs with sacrifice flies.

Tim Cullen's three run homer in the ninth inning boosted the Senators past Kansas City. Jim Hunter and Ken Harrelson each had two runs batted in for the Athletics, and Paul Casanova hit a three-run shot for Washington.

Eddie Mathews drove in a run in his debut with Detroit, and Mickey Lolich stopped Cleveland on four hits before the rains came. Mathews' RBI came on a single in the second inning as he started at third for the injured Don Wert.

The first game at Chicago seemed as if it might never start — a two-hour rain delay slowed things considerably — and the second game seemed as if it might never end. The final out was registered at 1:36 a.m. CDT.

Pete Ward's two-run homer was the deciding factor in the opener and Curt Blefary's three-run homer keyed a five-run Baltimore third in the nightcap.

Clay Married In Chicago, Second Trip For Ex-Champ

CHICAGO (AP) — Cassius Clay was married in a quiet ceremony Friday night, entertained a few friends and relatives at a reception, then took his 17-year-old bride on a surprise, friendly visit to neighbors.

The 25-year-old prize fighter, recently stripped of his heavyweight title, and Belinda Boyd were wed in Clay's South Side home in a Black Muslim ceremony.

Originally scheduled for Sunday, the wedding was quickly arranged Friday and was closed to the press.

The deposed champion, who prefers his Black Muslim name of Muhammad Ali, said he had been romantically interested in his new wife for more than a year. The bride is the oldest of four children of Raymond Boyd, of suburban Blue Island, himself a Muslim.

The wedding was attended by the bride's parents, but Clay's mother and father flew in from Louisville, Ky., too late to witness the ceremony.

Miss Boyd wore the simple, floor-length white dress and veil used by female Muslims, while the boxer was attired in a black tuxedo jacket.

"It was a very small wedding," Clay said after the ceremony.

Clay was indefinite about honeymoon plans, implying that he planned to stay in Chicago for at least a day or two. However, a member of his training camp, Gene Mason, said that Clay and his bride would be on their way to Hawaii today.

Clay politely sidestepped questions about his immediate plans and took leave of reporters when he spied three elderly persons on the stairs of the house across the street.

"Excuse me, I'm going to say hello to my neighbors," he said. "I've just moved in and I haven't met any of them yet."

Clay is appealing a prison term he received for refusing to take the military draft oath. He contended he could not take the oath on the grounds that he is a Black Muslim minister.

It was the second marriage for Clay who was divorced from Sonji M. Roi, 27, a former model, last year. Clay said that the marriage was dissolved because his first wife would not become a member of the Muslims and live up to the sect's religious code.

Astros, Seventh Straight Victim

By the Associated Press

The vise-tight pennant race so long a trademark of the National League has been only a hazy memory this August, and the St. Louis Cardinals seem determined to keep it that way.

The red-hot Cardinals spun off their seventh straight victory Friday night, whipping Houston 5-3 on Steve Carlton's six-hitter. The victory ballooned the Cards' league lead to 11 1/2 games.

St. Louis has shattered the race with a torried 13-4 pace this month. They led by just 3 1/2 games as the month began, but won five straight games and have been just about unstoppable ever since.

Carlton struck out 11 Friday night and didn't allow a hit after the sixth inning. Julian Javier and Mike Shannon handled the hitting, each smashing a home run and driving in a pair of runs. Shannon's 10th and Javier's 12th of the season.

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago tripped Philadelphia 3-1, Pittsburgh pounded New York 7-2, San Francisco stopped Cincinnati 3-1 and Los Angeles downed Atlanta 5-1.

Shannon's fourth-inning homer was the first hit off Houston's Mike Cuellar. After Tim McCarver reached on an error, Javier unloaded and the Cards had a 3-0 lead.

Bob Aspromonte's two-run double rocked Carlton in the sixth, but the young left-hander settled down and did not allow another hit. The victory ran his record to 11-6.

Dick Hughes, 11-4 will try to pitch the Cards to their eight straight at Houston tonight against Astros rookie Don Wilson, 8-8.

Rookie left-hander Jim Ellis won his first major league game and halted a four-game Chicago losing streak as the Cubs dropped the Phillies.

Ellis, recalled from Tacoma August 10, worked into the seventh inning before giving way to Chuck Hartenstein. Glenn Beckert drove in two Chicago runs as the Cubs beat ex-teammate Larry Jackson.

Bob Veale hurled a seven-hiter and Willie Stargell reached Forbes Field's distant right field roof for the second time this season as Pittsburgh pounded the Mets.

Stargell's fourth inning homer - his 17th of the year - was only the 12th to go over the roof in Forbes Field's 59-year history. Stargell is the first player ever to put two in that sector in one season.

Ray Sadecki hurled a six-hitter and Jesus Alou lined four hits and drove in two runs as the Giants dropped the Reds.

Willie Mays' fifth inning single snapped a 1-1 tie and Alou's fourth hit of the game brought in another Giant run in the eighth as San Francisco beat Milt Pappas, 12-8. Sadecki is 5-4.

Lou Johnson slammed two home runs and Don Drysdale won his first game since July 15 as the Dodgers sunk the Braves. Johnson connected in the first and fourth innings against loser Denny Lemaster and then walked and scored in the Dodgers' three-run wrapup rally in the sixth.

TIM McCARVER of the St. Louis Cardinals is one of the National League's leading hitters. Since he's on base so often, Tim scores his share of runs, too. Like this one.

Foresters Drop Extra Inning Duel in In Series

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Bridgeport, Conn., gets a day off today to recuperate from an eight-inning victory in the opening round of Connie Mack baseball world series in Farmington.

The Yankees made nine errors but remained composed enough to gain a 5-4 victory over Sikeston, Mo., in the regularly scheduled seven-inning game Friday night.

Portland, Ore., joined Bridgeport in the winners bracket with a 6-4 victory against Nashville, Tenn., in the double-elimination tournament.

Sikeston and Nashville meet at 9:30 p.m. tonight in a losers bracket game.

Bridgeport third baseman John Slosar ended the three-hour, 15-minute game with a single in the bottom half of the eighth0 inning, scoring Rich Mariconda, who had singled and taken second after losing pitcher Gene Walker hit a batter.

STEVE CARLTON chalked up his 11th season victory last night by posting a six-hit, 5-3, victory over Houston in the Astrodome. He had 11 strikeouts.

JULIAN JAVIER blasted his 12th homer of the season last night, enabling the Cardinals to streak to its seventh straight victory. The Cards won, 5-3.

MIKE SHANNON cracked his 10th homer of the season as the Cards beat Houston 5-3 last night to move out into an 11 1/2 game lead. It was the Birds seventh straight win.

Sox Slugger Felled, Out Three Weeks

By the Associated Press

The only hit the California Angels could make for 6 1-3 innings Friday night was one by their pitcher and it's still got the Boston Red Sox plenty worried.

In the fourth inning of Boston's 3-2 victory, Angel starter Jack Hamilton felled Boston slugger Tony Conigliaro by hitting him with a pitch on the left temple and knocking him unconscious.

Conigliaro was rushed to the hospital where the diagnosis was a cracked cheek bone, severe nasal hemorrhage and three weeks out of the line-up. The first two will bother Tony, but the Red Sox, still fighting for the American League pennant, are sure to feel the effects of the latter.

Gary Bell stopped California without a hit until with one out in the seventh inning, Jimmie Hall hit his 14th homer over the left-field screen. Hall followed with another homer in the ninth.

Bell led the Boston hitting attack, too, connecting for a double and a run-scoring single. Rico Petrocelli tripled in another run and scored on a bad relay throw to the plate by Jim Fregosi.

In other American League games, New York and Minnesota split a twi-night doubleheader 1-0 and 3-4, Washington edged Kansas City 7-6, Detroit stopped Cleveland 4-0 in a rain-shortened affair and Chicago split with Baltimore, winning 3-1 before losing 8-2.

Joe Pepitone drove in a run with a single in the first inning of the Twins-Yankees opener and Steve Barber made it stand up the rest of the game, shutting out the Twins on six hits.

The Yanks were winning the nightcap 3-2 behind Fred Talbot's five-hit pitching, when Rich Reese turned things around with a two-run pinch homer in the ninth. Harmon Killebrew drove in two runs with sacrifice flies.

Tim Cullen's three run homer in the ninth inning boosted the Senators past Kansas City. Jim Hunter and Ken Harrelson each had two runs batted in for the Athletics, and Paul Casanova hit a three-run shot for Washington.

Eddie Mathews drove in a run in his debut with Detroit, and Mickey Lolich stopped Cleveland on four hits before the rains came. Mathews' RBI came on a single in the second inning as he started at third for the injured Don Wert.

The first game at Chicago seemed as if it might never start — a two-hour rain delay slowed things considerably — and the second game seemed as if it might never end. The final out was registered at 1:36 a.m. CDT.

Pete Ward's two-run homer was the deciding factor in the opener and Curt Blefary's three-run homer keyed a five-run Baltimore third in the nightcap.

Clay Married In Chicago, Second Trip For Ex-Champ

CHICAGO (AP) — Cassius Clay was married in a quiet ceremony Friday night, entertained a few friends and relatives at a reception, then took his 17-year-old bride on a surprise, friendly visit to neighbors.

The 25-year-old prize fighter, recently stripped of his heavyweight title, and Belinda Boyd were wed in Clay's South Side home in a Black Muslim ceremony.

Originally scheduled for Sunday, the wedding was quickly arranged Friday and was closed to the press.

The deposed champion, who prefers his Black Muslim name of Muhammad Ali, said he had been romantically interested in his new wife for more than a year. The bride is the oldest of four children of Raymond Boyd, of suburban Blue Island, himself a Muslim.

The wedding was attended by the bride's parents, but Clay's mother and father flew in from Louisville, Ky., too late to witness the ceremony.

Miss Boyd wore the simple, floor-length white dress and veil used by female Muslims, while the boxer was attired in a black tuxedo jacket.

"It was a very small wedding," Clay said after the ceremony.

Clay was indefinite about honeymoon plans, implying that he planned to stay in Chicago for at least a day or two. However, a member of his training camp, Gene Mason, said that Clay and his bride would be on their way to Hawaii today.

Clay politely sidestepped questions about his immediate plans and took leave of reporters when he spied three elderly persons on the stairs of the house across the street.

"Excuse me, I'm going to say hello to my neighbors," he said. "I've just moved in and I haven't met any of them yet."

Clay is appealing a prison term he received for refusing to take the military draft oath. He contended he could not take the oath on the grounds that he is a Black Muslim minister.

It was the second marriage for Clay who was divorced from Sonji M. Roi, 27, a former model, last year. Clay said that the marriage was dissolved because his first wife would not become a member of the Muslims and live up to the sect's religious code.

"IN MY FIRST YEAR AS A SWIFT HOMES DEALER, I NETTED OVER $26,000!"

Fred Kessler, owner of Kessler-Swift Homes in New England, had his own engineering and manufacturing firm for many years. "But the profit squeeze was getting tighter and tighter," he says. "I wasn't clearing enough money for all the headaches."

After he learned about Swift Homes, he sold the business and applied for a Swift franchise in a portion of New Hampshire and Vermont. Now he and his wife, Florence, work together, clear more than they did with his previous business and have time to enjoy the resort area in which they live.

"We're looking forward to a greater second year," Fred says. "The housing business in general is better than it was our first year. The special Swift features are so appealing to customers that we really see no ceiling on this new career."

Maybe you have a business that doesn't reward you enough. Or maybe you're working for someone else and would like the challenge and prestige of being a Swift Homes dealer. Send the coupon below to find out more about this exciting opportunity.

SWIFT HOMES OFFER . . . Complete Merchandising Program; beautiful line of year-round and vacation pre-cut homes; advertising and promotion help; an AAA-1 Dun and Bradstreet rating. LONG-TERM FINANCING FOR YOUR CUSTOMERS AT NO MONEY DOWN.

YOU NEED . . . Minimum of $7,500 for working capital. Suitable lot for your Swift A-Frame Department Store of Homes. Willingness to devote full time to your Swift dealership. If you desire, Swift will finance your Department Store of Homes. (pictured below)

DON'T YOU READ BEFORE YOU BUY?

Where but in print can you get so close to the advertising messages that interest you? Where else can a woman clip the coupons and recipes that intrigue her? Or tear out tips to try on leftovers? Or mark, for future marketing, any of the colorful food ideas which strike her fancy?

And where else can she circle and compare the colors and styles of clothing and furnishings that appeal to her? Where else, in fact, can any message be re-run at will by an interested audience?

So make sure a good part of your advertising message gets into print. Let somebody's eyes linger over it as long as they like. Let somebody's scissors clip it free of competition. And then watch someone's pocket or purse carry it to the place of purchase. Print makes sense because print makes sales.

DON'T YOU READ BEFORE YOU BUY?

Where but in print can you get so close to the advertising messages that interest you? Where else can a woman clip the coupons and recipes that intrigue her? Or tear out tips to try on leftovers? Or mark, for future marketing, any of the colorful food ideas which strike her fancy?
And where else can she circle and compare the colors and styles of clothing and furnishings that appeal to her? Where else, in fact, can any message be re-run at will by an interested audience?
So make sure a good part of your advertising message gets into print. Let somebody's eyes linger over it as long as they like. Let somebody's scissors clip it free of competition. And then watch someone's pocket or purse carry it to the place of purchase. Print makes sense because print makes sales.

"IN MY FIRST YEAR AS A SWIFT HOMES DEALER, I NETTED OVER $26,000!"

Fred Kessler, owner of Kessler-Swift Homes in New England, had his own engineering and manufacturing firm for many years. "But the profit squeeze was getting tighter and tighter," he says. "I wasn't clearing enough money for all the headaches."

After he learned about Swift Homes, he sold the business and applied for a Swift franchise in a portion of New Hampshire and Vermont. Now he and his wife, Florence, work together, clear more than they did with his previous business and have time to enjoy the resort area in which they live.

"We're looking forward to a greater second year," Fred says. "The housing business in general is better than it was our first year. The special Swift features are so appealing to customers that we really see no ceiling on this new career."

Maybe you have a business that doesn't reward you enough. Or maybe you're working for someone else and would like the challenge and prestige of being a Swift Homes dealer. Send the coupon below to find out more about this exciting opportunity.

ARMY CORP. CHARLES L. BRADLEY receives a purple heart medal for wounds in Vietnam Maj. Gen. Lloyd E. Fellenz pins on the medal at Camp Zama, Japan.

Ann Landers

Woman With Unruly Child Needs to Get Outside Help

Dear Ann Landers: I hate to admit that a three-year-old child has me over a barrel, but I am completely defeated.

The man I married was left with this youngster. Jim's wife walked out when the boy was six months old. Jim's mother took the boy for a year and then Jim hired a housekeeper. When I married Jim I was thrilled to be a mother to this child. Now I'm a nervous wreck.

The child chews holes in everything, breaks toys, destroys furniture, refuses to play with other children, won't watch anything but adult TV programs and insists on going everywhere we go.

I have tried to reason with the boy but he acts as if he doesn't hear me when I speak to him. I have explained that his real mother wouldn't cook for him or his daddy, that she didn't love him as I do and that she finally ran away and left him.

Jim says the boy realizes I am not his real mother and that is why he refuses to accept me. Please tell me how I can be a real mother to this boy.
---WABASH BLUES

Dear Wabash: You need outside help and fast. The boy is frightfully insecure, and you haven't helped matters by telling him his real mother didn't love him and that she ran away from him.

Have the child's pediatrician check the child's hearing, his metabolism---the works. Then learn where to take the boy for evaluation. This youngster has emotional problems. You cannot handle him alone.

Dear Ann Landers: I come from an average American middle class family. We ate off oilcloth and mismatched dishes. Mom never bought glasses. We used jelly and cheese jars. She was a good mother and I am not criticizing her, just stating facts.

When I married, I decided to do things nicer than my mother ----not because I wanted to put on the dog but because I believe people should uplift themselves if they can. My married sisters are still setting their tables like Mom----jelly glasses and sometimes newspapers instead of oilcloth. I am not criticizing them, either. I say, "To each his own."

Next month two nieces are getting married. Their mothers (my sisters with the newspapers) have suggested that I buy a place setting of china or a setting of sterling silver for wedding gifts. The china is $50 a place setting. The silver is $62. I am in favor of people bettering themselves, but don't you think this is a lot of nerve?---UNCERTAIN KIN

Dear Kin: It was only a suggestion, and you can ignore it. As for "nerve," as one who believes in "uplifting" you should be happy that the younger generation plans to do things a little nicer than their mothers did.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read a letter in your column from a teen-ager. You answered: "I will be happy to listen to you any time you want to unload. That's what I'm here for."

Your answer touched me so that I cried. How wonderful to know there is somebody in this world a kid can count on. Yes, I know there are psychiatrists and counselors that will help, but you are more real. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for being there and caring.---A BUFFALO TEEN

Dear Teen: Thanks for letting me know I'm getting through. Your letter was a day-brightener.

Do you feel ill at ease---out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Offer to Buy House Valid when Accepted

By Jack Strauss, LL.B

Dick mailed Mr. Maxwell an offer to buy the latter's house. Overwhelmed by Dick's generosity, Mr. Maxwell lost no time in mailing Dick an acceptance. Before Dick received it, however, he reviewed his offer and he too became overwhelmed by his generosity. So much so, in fact, that he raced to the nearest telephone and attempted to withdraw it.

"It's too late," was Mr. Maxwell's answer. "I already mailed my acceptance."

"Maybe you did," Dick was willing to concede, "but I haven't yet received it. Therefore, I'm still free to cancel my offer."

Mr. Maxwell disagreed and took Dick to court to compel him to go through with the deal.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Dick to duck out of his generous offer?

This is how the judge ruled: Dick was bound by his offer. The judge held that an offer can be cancelled anytime before it is accepted. But, an offer is generally deemed accepted when the acceptance is mailed and not when it is received.

The megapode (big feet), a pheasantlike bird of Australia, builds a nest as large as a small house. It uses leaves, sticks and debris to construct a home sometimes 15 feet high, 50 feet in circumference.

Chopin's "Funeral March"

Chopin's "Funeral March" does not express grief over the death of an individual. Instead, it expresses the Polish composer's feelings over the loss of the independence of his native land.

PCA Directors Hear Speech by FCA Governor

Directors of the Sikeston Production Credit Association attended a press conference in St. Louis Tuesday for R. B. Tootell, Washington, D. C., governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

The average investment per farm worker in the United States has reached $41,000--more than twice the amount for workers in industry. On commercial family farms, investment per worker is nearer $100,000," Tootell said.

"Higher interest rates have not reduced the farmers' demands and the Farm Credit System last year borrowed a record $10 1/2 billion, while the Federal land banks lent $5.3 billion.

"Farmers borrowed $5.1 billion from their 463 PCAs nationally, a 13 per cent increase. Farmer's marketing and bank cooperatives also showed a 12 per cent increase on farm credits in spite of the tight money crises."

Sikeston PCA board members attending were Carl B. Raidt, Sikeston; Paul Bradley, Kewanee; Charles Causey, Bloomfield; Lester H. Bishop, East Prairie and Otto Lape, Bell City; and associate directors, Pervis Sebaugh, Daisy; and Louis Kalkbrenner, Poplar Bluff, and the PCA office staff, manager, Thatcher Scism, Wallace Waters and Kenneth Williams, all of Sikeston.

The Prayer

From
The Upper Room

Each person is tempted when he is lured and enticed by his own desire. (James 1:14, RSV)

PRAYER: Our Father, Thou knowest we do and say things that are sinful. Forgive us, we pray. Save us from discouragement and despair, from giving in to temptations that would hinder us from living at our best. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Ann Landers

Woman With Unruly Child Needs to Get Outside Help

Dear Ann Landers: I hate to admit that a three-year-old child has me over a barrel, but I am completely defeated.

The man I married was left with this youngster. Jim's wife walked out when the boy was six months old. Jim's mother took the boy for a year and then Jim hired a housekeeper. When I married Jim I was thrilled to be a mother to this child. Now I'm a nervous wreck.

The child chews holes in everything, breaks toys, destroys furniture, refuses to play with other children, won't watch anything but adult TV programs and insists on going everywhere we go.

I have tried to reason with the boy but he acts as if he doesn't hear me when I speak to him. I have explained that his real mother wouldn't cook for him or his daddy, that she didn't love him as I do and that she finally ran away and left him.

Jim says the boy realizes I am not his real mother and that is why he refuses to accept me. Please tell me how I can be a real mother to this boy.
---WABASH BLUES

Dear Wabash: You need outside help and fast. The boy is frightfully insecure, and you haven't helped matters by telling him his real mother didn't love him and that she ran away from him.

Have the child's pediatrician check the child's hearing, his metabolism---the works. Then learn where to take the boy for evaluation. This youngster has emotional problems. You cannot handle him alone.

Dear Ann Landers: I come from an average American middle class family. We ate off oilcloth and mismatched dishes. Mom never bought glasses. We used jelly and cheese jars. She was a good mother and I am not criticizing her, just stating facts. When I married, I decided to do things nicer than my mother ----not because I wanted to put on the dog but because I believe people should uplift themselves if they can. My married sisters are still setting their tables like Mom----jelly glasses and sometimes newspapers instead of oilcloth. I am not criticizing them, either. I say, "To each his own."

Next month two nieces are getting married. Their mothers (my sisters with the newspapers) have suggested that I buy a place setting of china or a setting of sterling silver for wedding gifts. The china is $50 a place setting. The silver is $62. I am in favor of people bettering themselves, but don't you think this is a lot of nerve?---UNCERTAIN KIN

Dear Kin: It was only a suggestion, and you can ignore it. As for "nerve," as one who believes in "uplifting" you should be happy that the younger generation plans to do things a little nicer than their mothers did.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read a letter in your column from a teen-ager. You answered: "I will be happy to listen to you any time you want to unload. That's what I'm here for."

Your answer touched me so that I cried. How wonderful to know there is somebody in this world a kid can count on. Yes, I know there are psychiatrists and counselors that will help, but you are more real. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for being there and caring.---A BUFFALO TEEN

Dear Teen: Thanks for letting me know I'm getting through. Your letter was a day-brightener.

Do you feel ill at ease---out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Offer to Buy House Valid when Accepted

By Jack Strauss, LL.B

Dick mailed Mr. Maxwell an offer to buy the latter's house. Overwhelmed by Dick's generosity, Mr. Maxwell lost no time in mailing Dick an acceptance. Before Dick received it, however, he reviewed his offer and he too became overwhelmed by his generosity. So much so, in fact, that he raced to the nearest telephone and attempted to withdraw it.

"It's too late," was Mr. Maxwell's answer. "I already mailed my acceptance."

"Maybe you did," Dick was willing to concede, "but I haven't yet received it. Therefore, I'm still free to cancel my offer."

Mr. Maxwell disagreed and took Dick to court to compel him to go through with the deal.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Dick to duck out of his generous offer?

This is how the judge ruled: Dick was bound by his offer. The judge held that an offer can be cancelled anytime before it is accepted. But, an offer is generally deemed accepted when the acceptance is mailed and not when it is received.

PCA Directors Hear Speech by FCA Governor

Directors of the Sikeston Production Credit Association attended a press conference in St. Louis Tuesday for R. B. Tootell, Washington, D. C., governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

The average investment per farm worker in the United States has reached $41,000--more than twice the amount for workers in industry. On commercial family farms, investment per worker is nearer $100,000," Tootell said.

"Higher interest rates have not reduced the farmers' demands and the Farm Credit System last year borrowed a record $10 1/2 billion, while the Federal land banks lent $5.3 billion.

"Farmers borrowed $5.1 billion from their 463 PCAs nationally, a 13 per cent increase. Farmer's marketing and bank cooperatives also showed a 12 per cent increase on farm credits in spite of the tight money crises."

Sikeston PCA board members attending were Carl B. Raidt, Sikeston; Paul Bradley, Kewanee; Charles Causey, Bloomfield; Lester H. Bishop, East Prairie and Otto Lape, Bell City; and associate directors, Pervis Sebaugh, Daisy; and Louis Kalkbrenner, Poplar Bluff, and the PCA office staff, manager, Thatcher Scism, Wallace Waters and Kenneth Williams, all of Sikeston.

The Prayer From The Upper Room

Each person is tempted when he is lured and enticed by his own desire. (James 1:14, RSV)

PRAYER: Our Father, Thou knowest we do and say things that are sinful. Forgive us, we pray. Save us from discouragement and despair, from giving in to temptations that would hinder us from living at our best. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

BENTON -- If you are going to be seeding new pastures or renovating old pastures during August or early September one of the important decisions that you have to make is just what seeding mixture you will use.

Most every farm has a need for different mixtures in different pasture fields. There are a number of things that you need to consider in selecting your grasses and legumes to seed if you want to avoid ending up with a pasture that doesn't give you the kind of grazing you want when you want it.

1. How well are the various grasses and legumes adapted to the soils in your fields -- and to the climate in your area?
2. Do you intend to use them not only for pasture but sometimes for hay, silage, green chop or a combination of these uses?
3. What type of livestock do you plan to graze the pasture?
4. What time of the season will you most need the pasture?
5. Just how much pasture and forage in total will you need for your livestock operation?

Generally, you will want at least one grass and one legume in your mixture. The legumes may last only a few years under grazing, but while you have them they will furnish some nitrogen for the grass, will help spread grazing through more of the season, and will improve grazing quality.

When the legume does thin, you will need to depend on the longer lived grass and nitrogen in your topdressings of fertilizer for continued high production.

The grasses that generally fit best in pasture mixture in Southeast Missouri are tall fescue, orchardgrass, bromegrass, timothy, and in some cases Reed's canary grass.

Alfalfa, birdsfoot trefoil, ladino clover, and lespedeza need to be considered among the legumes.

When you have all these things to consider in selecting the best pasture mixture or mixture for your own situations you can see it is not a simple matter. This is one reason that your University of Missouri College of Agriculture has developed a Missouri Livestock Forage Manual and has them available in your County University Extension Center. This manual contains information that will enable you to study for your own livestock forage program on your farm so you can pick the pasture mixture that best fits your needs. Your County Extension Center also has a number of MU Guides on various grasses and legumes that should be helpful. You will want to ask especially for Guide 4010 "Seeding Rates for Field Crops, Pasture Mixtures" and Guide 4650 "How to Establish Pastures".

COVERS FOR TRENCH SILOS

With ensiling time approaching, many farmers are asking about covers for trench silos.

If you want to reduce spoilage in a bunker or trench silo, it's necessary to distribute the silage and thoroughly pack it with a tractor as it goes into the silo. As the silo filling is completed, round up the center section so drainage will occur. Thoroughly pack again with the tractor and immediately cover with black poly-ethylene or dark colored poly-vinyl. This plastic should be in one piece wide enough to cover the entire surface of the silage.

Thicknesses of eight, six and four-mil plastic are available. The eight-mil stands a better chance of being in a condition to use more than one year . . . but so many things can happen to plastic in its use that many people prefer to buy the lower life and lower cost six or four-mil thickness and use it only one year.

To be effective . . . Ricketts says the plastic must be weighted down . . . especially at the edges and preferably all over the surface. This is to prevent air from getting under the plastic. Lime dust, saw dust, or even earth can be used for this job.

Plastic properly applied to exclude air from the silage will more than pay for the plastic material and the labor of application each year.

BENTON -- Is there a piece of beautiful furniture somewhere in your home hiding its beauty under old wax or finish? Well, now is the time to put a little effort forward to let that piece show off its beauty.

Refinishing old furniture or finishing new furniture is a hobby that many people enjoy. To see the beauty of the color and grain of the wood is one of the real joys of finishing and refinishing.

However, there are certain types of furniture where it is not wise to refinish. For example, furniture that is not worth refinishing.

Furniture is valuable if it is well constructed of good wood, not merely if it is old. Refinishing furniture whether it is an old article or a modern piece, requires time, energy, patience, and some expense. A piece of furniture worth reclaiming is made of good wood, is well designed, well constructed, and serves a practicaly use in the home. If the piece has these essentials, the finished result will be worth the time and effort required for refinishing. If not, it might be wise to use other furniture rather than trying to refinish the piece that does not meet these standards.

Some furniture simply needs a good cleaning job whether the furniture has a smooth or hard finish. For general cleaning why not try this mixture of:

1 tablespoons turpentine
3 tablespoons boiled linseed oil
1 quart hot water

The turpentine and boiled linseed oil can be purchased at most paint or hardware stores. This mixture must be kept hot as you use it. Using a clean cloth, wet it in the solution and rub it on the section of furniture at a time. Then polish with a dry clean cloth. In this mixture the turnpentine serves to cut the dirt, while the oil lubricates and polishes the wood.

This mixture SHOULD NOT be used on a shellac finish as the water may cause it to spot or turn white. A worn shellac finish should usually be removed, and the article refinished. To determine whether or not the finish is shellac, rub a small area on the underneath side of the piece with denatured alcohol. If the finish is shellac, it will soften.

When your furniture has been thoroughly cleaned, protect it with a good polish or wax.

To list all the steps in refinishing an article would be a long process. May we suggest instead that if you are about to begin to refinish or are interested in refinishing, that you write your University of Missouri Extension Center to send you a copy of Bulleting C-829 titled "Preparing Furniture for Refinishing."

This excellent bulletin will give you advice on how to remove old finishes, make necessary repairs, raise dents, fill cracks and holes, remove dark spots, sand, stain and apply a filler. It will help you add beauty to your room by helping to restore beauty to your furniture.

Farm Management News

BENTON -- How many test plots on fertility, varieties, crop rotation irrigation, drainage, etc., are you conducting on your farm?

Whether by design or accident, you probably have several such plots.

Why not take the time to record the yield figures on fields which have been handled differently this year. This information will facilitate applying dollar and cents figures to what some of these practices may have been worth. Consequently, you should be better informed for planning next year's cropping practices.

I am sure you are aware of the shortcomings of only one year's yields, but by the same token you must record yields the first year before you can have a two, three or four year average.

What are some of the things to check?

1. Soybean following a crop which was fertilized last year as compared to continuous soybeans.
2. Yields from well limed fields as compared to yields low in limestone.
3. Soybeans following a fertilized cotton crop that was destroyed as compared to continuous soybeans.
4. Crop yields on graded soil whether or not it was irrigated as compared to ungraded and non - irrigated crops.
5. Further additions to this list should include yield differences among crop varieities, herbicides, insecticides, etc.

Undoubtedly you can make several additions to this list.

Many of you have these variations in fertilizer usage, varieties, herbicides, etc., in the same field on the same soil type.

Harvest is less than a month away on corn and not much farther away on soybeans. So, now is the time to work out the details in order to record these yields and not seriously delay harvesting rates.

Cigarettes Stolen

A total of 249 package of cigarettes were reported stolen from a vending machine at the 21 Club, 1141 West Malone. The theft was reported to police Friday.

Entry was gained through a window on the southeast side of the building. The machine had been pryed with a small round object, police said.

In other activity, a car driven by Linda Kay Francis, 18, 722 Delmar, struck a parked car owned by Ronald E. Lee, 314 Hardin, at 2:31 a.m. today. The Lee vehicle was parked at his residence at the time of the accident. Miss Francis suffered a cut lip from the impact.
